Acne isn't fun, and it isn't fun to make fun of either (whether you are or not). There's nothing I can really do about mine, and even though I'm 17 it just gets worse and worse. I've considered accutane a few times but after looking at a list of side-effects, fuck that.

I'll probably post my picture tomorrow.

The irony here is that you're not the first person to say that.

In two days.

In two completely different people.

The majority of the problem is that I'm trying to keep my teeth covered, as I have what I like to call Raptor Mouth. Basically, my front two teeth jut out like a bitch, so it looks awkward when I smile. So, I keep my mouth shut.

Better to have giant lips than to look like a slack-jawed yokle.

Taken last week after a shower, so my hair was really slick and awesome.

Chronojam and I in March (he didn't pack dress shoes, before you ask). We weren't going anywhere, I just wanted a nice picture. =P And yes, he is pretty tall (6'4").

Chronojam looking like a sniper when I asked him to. >=D The flash kept ruining the shading his eyes had, so I turned it off for the picture. It was taken a day after the previous one.

Picture of my eye taken a few months ago. I am squinting because the light was pretty bright, and bright light is the only way to see the green part. Otherwise it either looks teal or blue, depending on what color I put on my eyelids. Chronojam has green eyes with brown in the center that looks like orange, but I can't find a clear picture of his.

lol... Where did I ever say that followers of Wicca invented it? It's been a symbol of Christianity, Paganism, Israelites and quite a few others. There's only two accepted views of the pentacle, and that's either of it being evil or of it symbolizing life. I opt for the latter, as you find a perfect pentacle within a cut apple.

Aircraftkiller wrote on Sat, 20 May 2006 22:43What's your point?

Let's see...

1. You see a picture of a Goth wearing a pentacle. The picture was posted as a sad attempt at humor to suggest that Venom Pawz got the scar on the top of her wrist by attempting to slit her wrist, not from a cyst removal. Lamé humor aside...
2. You immediately assume that the image is of JohnDoe and proceed to inject your imperical knowledge of the universe since everyone else on the planet runs around their daily lives in ignorant trances.
3. You assume that since the image posted is a Goth dude wearing a pentacle that JohnDoe is a pentacle wearing Goth. You also assume that because the pentacle is on a Goth, that he is probably just like most of the other Goth's you know and doesn't have a clue what the pentacle around his neck really stands for. After assuming all that, you proceed to assume.. well, assume may not be the correct word, you were actually just hoping that he wasn't stupid.. like all those other Goths you know.
4. After "hoping" that he knows that the pentacle is a sign of life, not Satan. (and that's a direct quote) you concede that it is actually accepted as a sign of both (making your entire "hopeful" sentiment moot).

That was my point.. but I'm guessing you already knew that.

Instead of passing your opinion off as fact, had you stated "Do you wear the pentacle as a sign of life, or a sign of Satan?.. I consider it a sign of life, myself".. We wouldn't be having this cordial conversation.

Well, yeah, I'm going to assume that it's the poster's photograph if they post in a thread that says "Post yourself"... I'm certainly not going to think it's someone other than them unless they specifically say so.

That style of dress is not an assumption lol... That is full blown "goth". The rest may be an assumption, but that's why I asked him if he knew what it really meant. Good detective work there!

And FYI, we wouldn't be having this conversation if you'd have the self-control to ignore what I write... Which goes for me, as well, since I should have just ignored your attempt at stirring up arguments.

How was I wrong? You said it was a sign of life, not Satan. I said it completely depended on your beliefs. Then you conceded that it was accepted as either.

My original intent was to correct your comment that it was NOT a sign of satan.

Well, it is accepted as either, but only when used a certain way. For example, if the pentacle has the star properly faced (pointing upward) then it shows the relationship of spirit being the highest purpose in life, while air\fire\water\earth are lower forms of existence.

When inverted, it shows that earth and fire are more important than spirit; that earthly things take precedence over matters of the soul. So we were both wrong, I just didn't bother explaining in depth.

Goths creep me out.

This girl in my history class is always telling me how good it feels to bleed. I thought she was joking the first time she told me so I laughed. Then she said "Why are you laughing?".
That bitch scares me...

Sometimes it's hard not to say "WHAT THE FUCK YOU CRAZY BITCH?"

I can care less about what you think of goths, but I do care what you think about metalheads. That is because I am one. Why the hell do you stay away from them? Also, I am NOT greasy.

I said the greasy ones...I have enough friends than like Metal, but I stay away from the ones that wear black every day, smell and never wash their super-long hair.

BTW Good job turning this thread completely offtopic just because of a silly joke

To me, you implied that they were all greasy.

Who cares if it gets off topic?

It's not like you are going to read anything in here that is going to benefit you in absolutely anyway.

Sorry, a "real" goth wouldn't be wearing a Nightwish shirt.
