I just saw this movie. Scared me into a coma. The only movie that's ever scared me in any way. HIGHLY recommend it.

As far as the plot:

The back of the DVD coverIts name:Event Horizon. The high-tech, pioneering research spacecraft mysteriously vanished without a trace, on its maiden voyage seven years earlier. But a weak, persistant signal from the long-missing craft prompts a rescue team...

Oddly enough, there aren't any aliens in this movie. Yay!

Oh, and the cast is good. Laurence Fishburne from the Matrix and Sam Neil from Jurassic Park are in it. Buncha others.

If you don't plan on watching it, here's the spoilers and crap.

You pretty much blew up my cheap excuse of a spoiler-tag. Meh.

Oh, yeah. I don't get to see hardly any movies these days. Since he let me see this, I wonder if he'd let me see Starship Troopers? I loved the animated series. Bugs cutting people in half on Kids WB! Lol, nostalgia...

PS: Uh, IWarrriors? Toggle SpoilerThe movie had people sodomizing each other while slitting their partner's wrists, people reaching down their mouths and ripping out their intestines, and people being blown out airlocks and being 'depressurized.' Sounds gory to me.

For the sorry individuals who haven't read the book, a few quick pointers:

- Mobile Infantry troops wear power armor with jump-jets.
- Mobile Infantry deploy from orbit using drop pods.
- The Rodger Young does not get destroyed.
- Johnny's dad does not die, he enlists and fights after his wife is killed. He is still alive at the end, and has a conversation with his son in the final scene.
- Dizzy is a man. Johnny and Dizzy never hook up.
- The Bugs have technology. Ships and weapons and such... not just claws and jaws and plasma farts.
- Johnny does not enlist because he wanted to impress Carmen. They weren't nearly that close. She is in the book, and she is the helmsman of the Rodger Young, but she is hardly a main character. He enlists because he really does want to be a citizen, and feels it is his responsibility to serve to earn that status.

There's a lot more, but those are the ones I remember from the last time I read the book. This thread makes me want to go dig it out and read it again. Starship Troopers is required reading at every major military academy in the United States. Poor Robert A. must be rolling over in his grave. Such amazing things could be done with that book, and instead they choose to make it a guts'n'gore fest.

You seem to be under the mistaken impression that I was talking to you. Ok, fine, you flamed me... now I am talking to you. Happy?

Heinlein was a damn good author, one of the best in his field. I wish I could have met the man; sadly he died while I was still in diapers. I've yet to read a single one of his books that doesn't contain some kind of social commentary woven into the story in such a way that it enriches and deepens the plot. Your precious movie took a very, very good book, twisted it, and spat it back out as an eye-candy extravaganza with shallow characters, a cliché script, and absolutely none of the depth that made Starship Troopers such a good read. So you think I'm a geek for pointing that out? Damn straight I am. I happen to like good books, and I happen to not like when Hollywood fucks them up.

A little dissimilarity is not a bad thing when translating something from print to screen; it is a different medium that requires that some different techniques be employed to fit the whole story in two hours' time. There is, however, a point beyond which it becomes offensive to me, both as a hopeless bookworm and as someone who intends to someday get his own work published. So yes, I do give a shit, and if that makes me a geek... fine, I'm a geek, and proud of it. Sorry to rant, but you've struck one of a very, very few things that I feel strongly about- mainly because I would never want to see any of my work screwed up in such a massive way, but also because Heinlein just happens to be one of my favorite authors (I get the same way about Frank Herbert's work). You have neither the influence nor the ability to make me shut up, so you can take your oh-so-enlightening commentary and shove it. And do please have a nice day.

Blablabla...learn to take the movie for what it is. I remember when I watched it on the big screen when it first came out and me and my friends couldn't help but laugh most of the time...the other people in the cinema got mad and really took the movie serious, whereas I've always seen it as a satire on those sci-fi/action flicks and a pretty entertaining one at that.

flashes back to an episode of the cartoon

These guys were transporting a captured Plasma Bug in a carrier. Unfortunately, the tranques they used wore off. The thing began to... uh... "take aim," and the plasma bugs on the ground began firing at the carrier...

Commander: Crap! What are we gonna do?

Soldier: I dunno, how about a little "bombing run?"

Commander: No way, this thing's too valuable!
Soldier: You could get a medal...
Commander: ...Time for a bombing run!

Anyway, they dropped the captured bug on top of the other bugs and it set off this trippy-cool blue mushroom cloud.

I'm actually Christian too. I don't just say that, I do believe in God and love him, but when it comes to sin I actually would seem like anyone else who isn't a Christian probably. As you can see I swear about as much as any person on the internet, and lately (due to a lot of anger I've been dealing with recently) I've been using bad language outside of the internet too quite a lot. Also, I don't respect my parents all the time, and I disobey them sometimes. I also judge a lot of people the wrong way and set up a lot of grudges in my mind. I know that all of that is wrong, and yet I still do it just as much. I'm not perfect, but I'll get better as I get older. But the thing is, being a Christian isn't supposed to be like a religion where there are all these rules and schedules you NEED to follow or else you fail. Sure, Christians try to be as much like Jesus as possible, but it's not like they are these rules posted on a bulletin that you have to follow in order to be a Christian. I can't really explain it, because just about nobody here would understand me. and also I'm not the best Christian ever and I don't know that much at all. Most likely everybody would understand this totally incorrectly.

I don't know, I just felt like saying that. But this was kind of directed towards berkut and people who responded to him relating to this subject. sorry to bring "religion" into the thread; I can take this to PM if anyone wants.

Anyone who has a problem with religion on a web-site needs help.

Have to admit you had guts to post that, though.

I watched that cartoon not because it was violent (which it was), but because I liked the cartoon.

Anyway, I find the concept of sin a bit strange. Humanity is an entity whose collective sense of self-superiority is dwarfed only by its curiously self-destructive tendencies.

Did you get all of that?

Uh, sorry. An example of what?

PS: Your sig broke. You're going to need a new one.

Heh... My last one was made with Windows Media Player.

never mind, it doesn't matter.

I know my signature image is broke. I put my stuff on an FTP account incognito gave me, but the server gets taken down for a little while sometimes for maintenance.

the siggy will be back.

I just watched it. It was an interesting movie, so I'll give it that. I guess one of its themes could be "never let your work get between you and your wife," eh?

Before this movie, the goriest one I had ever seen was Pearl Harbor. Oh, yeah. Big shock.

My moral of the story would be: A good captain never sends his crew through Hell.

if you think that, don't watch Ghost Ship. I've never seen Ghost Ship, but the beginning is the sickest thing you can see.
