First off, I'm posting this in the General Discussion forum rather than the Politics/Hot Issues forum for the simple reason that I believe that this thing is more for fun than anything serious.

Quote:You are a Social Moderate (43% permissive)

You exhibit a very well-developed sense of Right and Wrong and believe in economic fairness. It's quite short and seems relatively accurate (at least, in my case...), although I think everyone will get the message "You exhibit a very well-developed sense of Right and Wrong and believe in economic fairness."

My latest test scores:

You are a

Social Liberal
(81% permissive)

and an...

Economic Conservative
(100% permissive)

You are best described as a:

The test immediately before that (I had to adjust my social permissiveness.):

Social Liberal
(71% permissive)

and an...

Economic Conservative
(91% permissive)

You are best described as a:

Libertarian

This test isn't entirely accurate, as far as I'm concerned. I still think I'm more socially permissive than just 71-81%. Though, the political ideologies it ranks me as is pretty accurate. I'm really a minarchist. I do believe firmly that there needs to be SOME form of government (else several and militaristic governments will form out of anarchy) to keep the peace.

I believe in common sense, doing what's right and fiscal responsibility.

I refuse to be classified, and think the two party system absolutely undermines democracy.

Vote for the guy with common sense and the guts to do what's right even if it isn't popular.

We're NOT a democracy, though. We're a republic.

I like the idea of a party system, I just hate the two party domination. If most people woke up, they'd be much more supportive of libertarianism than this bs on both sides.

Even the founding fathers held alliances to parties, and they had two major parties.

I blame the people for being so willing to choose sides without knowing what they believe in.

That doesn't make one bit of difference, though. We both took the same test that's for American politics. My point is that while you say your right-wing side comes out more because you talk finances, you're pretty much in the middle. I understand both conservative parties have different ideas, but generally both are pro-Capitalism.
