Yeah, this game rocks. I just wanted to make a post about it because I like it so much. If you played the last Flatout you know what kind of insane action goes on here. This ones just like crazy jumping off stuff and slamming into things, parts flying, crashing through buildings. The enviroments are really destructable. Some of the crashes and crazy things you'll see will leave you in a state different than that which you were in prior to seeing them.

Here's a cool screenshot that shows how destroyable the cars are.

In it, you see two of the same vehicle, the orange one is me. Look at how destroyed my truck is.

Anyhow it has awesome graphics, runs really good on old computers and is mad fun and crazy.

Would it run on a rig with a Sempron 3000+, 512MB of DDR400 RAM and a 128MB Radeon 9250?

I wouldn't be suprised if it did. The original Flatout was the same way, It ran at like 150fps with everything maxed on my AMD Athlon XP 2100+ with a 128mb GeForce4 Ti4400. I'll look around on their forums to see if I see anyone with a similar setup to yours that runs the game. Or you could look if you want a faster answer.
