Any chance of a linux renguard client?

It doesn't have to actually function, just has to log the users name on the server, since the cheats don't work in linux, even under WINE/Cedega emulation.

And i'm getting sick of pop-ups on servers.

I guess I just fail at cheating then.

I'll just go back to my pop ups.

If you can find mac, he created one that worked for him. I'm not sure if it could be publically used though, as I think he basically use some trick into disabling the RG popups

The request to disable the popups has been asked a long time ago to be implemented in the new brenbot version but as to now without any luck.

Another question to any cedega users.

Do you find that your graphics get messed up, and you have to restart Ren after a match ends?

I don't use Cedega because I always have bad luck with it, but the problem you're getting is normal because you're running the game on an emulator. If Transgaming works extra hard to support Renegade, like they do for games like World of Warcraft, then that problem wouldn't be there. But, they won't.

My version of my linux renguard client is not for release, since its all a simple perl script, without any protection. Plus, it does not have any real security either.. so.. no
