What do you think about these browsers?

Internet Explorer?

Netscape?

Safari?

FireFox?

Here's what one person thinks and i'm with him.

"OPERA ROCKS.

ANYONE DISAGREEING WILL FACE MY WRATH."

"HUUR FIREFOX OBSCURITY"

"I PREFER THE COCK BROWSER, IT'S FLAWLESS AND WHEN IT COMES TO SURFING THE INTERNET"

"I USE INTERNET EXPLODER BECAUSE IT'S FLAWLESS AND KNOWS HOW TO FIXES BUGS BY ITSELF"

"SAFARI CUZ I LIEK ANIMALS"

"I'M 50, SO I USE NETSCAPE"

"YOU FOOLS ARE TECHNOLOGICALLY IMPAIRED, I USE MY MIND TO ACCESS THE INTERNET."

Dillo. But it's only for Linux.

I use firefox, but I'm considering switching to Opera. I just like the customization that extensions give you. (I don't want to hear "Hurr Opera duz that 2 without downloadin nething lol" because I have extensions that were custom coded for some forums I visit, and they are very, very helpful. Opera has nothing close.)

Internet Explorer?

- 7 - Not sure yet
- 6 - Not secure, not easy to use, not enough support for CSS
- 5 - Not secure, not easy to use, not enough support for CSS

Netscape?

- It's still around?

Safari?

- I respect Safari, but I don't use it

FireFox?

- Plugin support is the only thing it has over Opera.

If I'm not mistaken, Opera 9's widget system does everything Firefox "extensions" do

Show me widgets that:

1. Mimics Adblock plus (the inbuilt content blocker is not as good as adblock)
2. Will highlight the current element I have moused over on a page
3. Will allow me to change proxy servers with 1 click etc.

Opera widgets are as good as useless to me, they are too much like desktop widgets.

aka internet explorer?

I use firefox personally, but I have no problems with people who want to use other browsers, its all personal preference really.

Personally I just use Proxomitron for one and three; I'm not sure what you mean by two.

Personally I just use Proxomitron for one and three; I'm not sure what you mean by two. Proximitron looks good, but it's not an Opera widget.

For the second one, I have a plugin for FF that helps me design websites, it allows me to hover over an element, say a paragraph and it will show me where it is in the site structure, i.e. `html > body > div#main > div.content > p`

It also highlights the particular element, which is nifty for checking padding etc.

I actually have Opera installed, its not bad looking, but I still like firefox better. I like its extension system better and couldn't give two shits about widgets and adblocking and all that crap.
