37. Windows vs OS/2 = Michael Jackson vs Mike Tyson
38. The nice thing about Windows is - It does not just crash, it displays a dialog box and lets you press 'OK' first.
39. Microsoft is not the answer.
     Microsoft is the question.
     "No" is the answer!
40. McAfee-Question: Is Windows a virus?

        No, Windows is not a virus. Here's what viruses do:

        1. They replicate quickly - okay, Windows does that.
        2. Viruses use up valuable system resources, slowing down the system as they do so - okay, Windows does that.
        3. Viruses will, from time to time, trash your hard disk - okay, Windows does that too.
        4. Viruses are usually carried, unknown to the user, along with valuable programs and systems. Sigh... Windows does that, too.
        5. Viruses will occasionally make the user suspect their system is too slow (see 2.) and the user will buy new hardware. Yup, that's with Windows, too.
        Until now it seems Windows is a virus but there are fundamental differences:
        Viruses are well supported by their authors, are running on most systems, their program code is fast, compact and efficient and they tend to become more sophisticated as they mature.
        So Windows is not a virus. It's a bug.

41. Last words of a Windows user:
     1. Why does that work now?
     2. Where do I have to click now? - There?

93. What is the difference between Jurassic Park and Microsoft? - One is an over-rated high tech theme park based on prehistoric information and populated mostly by dinosaurs, the other is a Steven Spielberg movie.
94. How many Windows PC owners does it take to change a lightbulb? Just one, as long as you explain it's Plug'n'Play... they get confused if it doesn't come with a driver disk...
95. How do Microsoft employees exchange a bulb? Not at all... Bill Gates declares darkness as a standard.
96. Help! There are Windows everywhere! In my car, my house
97. Ever noticed how fast Windows runs? Neither did I!
98. Mouse not present - click twice to continue...
99. Who the fuck is General Failure? And why is he reading my harddisk?

100. What's the difference between windows '95 and highly destructive unstoppable virus? About 90 Megs of hard disk space.
101. Coming soon: EDLIN for Windows
102. I've got two Windows hardware emulators! Really! They works much more reliable than the original: one for Windows 3.11, one for Windows95.
  Unfortunately they have superscriped the emulator keys wrongly, so that on the Windows 3.11 emulator key "TURBO" and on the Windows 95 emulator is written "RESET"... But doesn't matter, works great.
103. Windows, it's not pretty, it's not ugly, but it's pretty ugly.

Even as i stand as a Windows user (XPP and Vista), i found some of these very amusing.

I have used a Macintosh before and wanted to test how Windows ran on it, using Dual Boot. It asked me to update to the latest version of Mac OSX (10.7) and guess what, the Dual Boot feature wouldent install itself on this version.

Never used Linux before but it seems everything has to be done through emulators?

I'm a Windows man, no matter how anyone puts it, and i probably will be untill i see a better version of something that doesn't have to run programs as an 'disk image' (.iso (Mac)) and doesn't need to run emulations to get it to do what you want (Linux).

Where did the emulators thing come from? Talk about not knowing what the crap you're saying. The only time you'd use an emulator is if you wanted to try Linux gaming. There are so many open-source programs and great equivalents that are all entirely free (that are for Linux). A lot of them I like much more than the equivalents I've seen on Windows.

Linux is a whole different world to discover.

I know little about Linux, but your comments about the Mac are completely false. 10.7 isn't even announced as far as I know of. No Macintosh programs "have to" run as a 'disk image'. Not to mention that Mac disk images are generally ".dmg" rather than ".iso". Why don't you actually go and use a Mac before you try to bash it?

I agree. I'm on a Mac right now (OS version 10.4.8 on my MacBook Pro w/ Intel CoreDuo 2.17gHz and 2 gigs of RAM) and I have used the Boot Camp software to dual boot to Windows XP ever since the day Boot Camp was released without a problem. Disk images (.dmg) are just Mac's version of a ZIP file. Once you install the app (which is the difficult procedure of dragging and dropping the app into your "Applications" folder) you eject the disk image and delete it.

Like i said, i have never used Linux before so generally, no, i don't have a clue what i'm talking about... when it comes to Linux OS.

I would also like to point out, it's been a while since i used a Mac and not everything is rememberd as it were when i was using the Mac.

I don't think there are any jokes about 2000 or XP in there, or Server 2003. I like to get the best of both worlds.

I use Windows XP as my prefered personal OS on my dekstop, 2000 on my slower laptop, netBSD at Uni to do C/C++ and Java on, and Linux to run Apache and MySQL on for my site. (Well, that's what my host uses.)

---

And I'm very happy using a mix, I doubt i'll ever use 'just one OS'.

I've always had XP. Only one bug's crept up so far...

My PC tries to boot with Generals: Zero Hour if I start the computer with it in the disk-tray.

Other than that, not a single glitch has formed.

Have you ever used a Mac? I find them a hell of a lot faster and more productive than Windows.
Then again, I find Ubuntu a hell of a lot faster and more productive than both.

Ya, a machine like a mac or a calculator will tend to be fast, but that is because they are so simple (of course the lack of options makes them suck, and thats probably why no one programs viruses for them, they could not get much worse. And if windows sucks so bad why is mac trying to get it onto their systems.)

I don't understand why people have utter hate toward Microsoft, and especially Windows; they should be respected somewhat for what they have become.
