Well if it's an explain your avatar thread...

Obviously Hank Hill from King of the Hill. Hank is a great guy. He has good values and does what he thinks is right. His wife is crazy and his boy ain't right, but he handles it well and they are a happy family. Basically Hank is just an awesome dude and I try to be like Hank.

Heh.

It's actually Dr. Alan Reed, the inventor of the Synaptic Link Technology. The government dropped his funds after he made the breakthrough to make humans and computers physically communicate, and he went heywire, thus forming The NEXUS Intruder Program.

"The NEXUS Intruder Program infiltrated NASDAs (North American Strategic Defence Agency) satellite nuclear defence systems and attacked the world. The counter attacks caused a nuclear fallout and only a few survived."

In the game you play as "The Project" and fight others for free will all over the world.

It's actually quite a good game... bar the graphics (it was 1999 you know, and originally for PSX).

Mine is Razgriz 4, callsign Archer from Ace Combat 5. I go by Archer or Razgriz in a lot of games because like me, he learns new things without any practice whatsoever. (I picked up a dulcimer yesterday and played "Anthem of the Soviet Union" like I knew it already.) I go by Berkut here only because at the time, I was playing the game in a Sukhoi S-37A Berkut. Anywho, Archer's my favorite VG character.

That, and he looks a bit like me IRL, so says the n00bstory folk.

Any sig I make is unrelated. All are made with Windows Media Player, which are really fun to make.

PS: Warranto, your avatar reminds me of Light Jak from JakIII, one of my favorite game characters.

Doitle, that boy aint right.

Pirate, yours is... odd...

Gbull, cool, but I kinda like Seymour better for some reason.
