Just rename "Skirmish00.mix" to "Skirmish002.mix" and name a different mix file "Skirmish00.mix" that will change the multiplayer practice map to any that you want.

You could always just play on lan setting with 1 person for number of players.

But then you have to have a connection of some type, or else renegade does not detect that you have an IP address.

If he used the internet to make this topic, he has a 'connection of some type' so he has an IP whether it's internal or external (LAN/WAN).

He could have made this topic at school, or in a public library. Or perhaps he has a computer that can play Renegade, and one that can connect to the Internet but is unable to run Renegade.

True, but why would he specifically want to change the skirmish map for multiplayer practice (cuts out school and library) and hosting a server (purpose of Night Regualtor (which cuts out that he's using someone elses machine))?

Think of it logically.

Night Regulator = www.nightregulator.co.uk
Changing map = Rename skirmish_00.mix to another name that will be memorable (Skirmish_01.mix etc) then take the map of your choice and rename that to Skirmish_00.mix.

Open svrcfg_skirmish.ini in notepad and change the rotation. You can also change starting credits, turn friendly fire on, etc.
