I came across a XBOX 360 Core System the other day and wanted to know if anyone wants it before I put it on E-bay. It's brand new.

It's listed at $299 on Xbox's website. I'm willing to let it go for $269 + S/H of around $15-20 through UPS/FedEx if anyone is interested. It will ship out in roughly a week, so you won't have it until after Christmas.

Available only to US/Canada.

So you're selling it at 10 $ under the original price. GL with that...

Yeah, I'd rather pay the extra $10 to actually go to a store and purchase a XBox 360 that I KNOW is brand new, and hasn't been tampered with. I'll also know that I'm actually getting what I'm paying for. Not to mention I won't have to worry about it being dropped or mishandled while being shipped.

If you're selling it for $10 under the retail price, it's not worth it.

If you're buying it from a retail store with a business license don't forget sales tax.

I bought my Xbox 360 from tiger direct, UPS next day shipping, something is wrong with it, when I play halo 2 on it, it gets all blurry and jumpy, looks better on original xbox. But, its not on HD, if you put it on HD, it looks allot better, and no jumpiness (but still, it should be jumpy at all..) so don't buy it off websites.

Anyone who knows anything about the Xbox 360 wouldn't be caught dead buying the Core system.
