gamemodding, can I ask why you did not trust BI? If this has got to do with Dead6re: He joined us when there was no reason to suspect him of anything bad. After heard some things about him, partly through Crimson, partly by ourself, we decided to kick him from the team. This was still not related to him cheating. He leaked important information that was said not to be leaked multiple times. This information could be used to create worse cheats than most of you have seen (unless you made them yourself). I have created these and have never let anyone read the code, however we talked about it with the coders and apparently Dead6re felt he needed to share this information. We at that point did not think he did it on purpose, but thought a kick from BI was necessary nonetheless. This is all information I can give about this as I do not want to leak what Dead6re partially leaked. If you are doubting about BI because of something else, please tell me what that is, as I am sure that at least the admins of BI are clean and trying their best to be as good as possible to the renegade community.

About Renguard, it is not possible to make a 100% cheatproof system as it runs on the client. I'm pretty sure it is being made as good as the coders can get it to work. I too think the support for the current version is not that good, however I do seriously wonder how you can say anything about the new version which is yet to be released... If you think you can make anything that works better than the next version of Renguard does, then it would be nice to see it in action too. If you think you can easily bypass/hack/whatever it when it is out, please share that information with the coders of it as it might be fixable then.

As for calling "BHS" retarded for something, you shouldn't consider BHS as one and the same person. Some of team members may in your opinion be retarded, maybe the way BHS handles problems too, however you cannot say the entire team is retarded because of that.

JohnDoe:

Unfortunately that analogy doesn't work. No one says that you MUST report all crimes (no one was questioned by a figure of authority here). Even if Crimson knew about it, it was not done in the name of BHS, therefor there is no connection that can be made. No court would deal a punishment against the business for the action of an individual done in his private time, even if that business knew about it. There was no association of the business with the crime, therefor the business can not be blamed for the crime.

No matter how you wish otherwise, all you have to rely on is your petty indulgence against them in trying to find whatever you can to make them look bad.

As for this lawyer thing, where do you get the idea that I'm going to be defending people?

Even if Crimson knew about it, it was not done in the name of BHS, therefor there is no connection that can be made. No court would deal a punishment against the business for the action of an individual done in his private time, even if that business knew about it. There was no association of the business with the crime, therefor the business can not be blamed for the crime.

What are Accessory and Obstruction charges then?

Accessory:

The act of helping someone commit a crime. Having knowledge of a crime does not constitute this.

Quote: A person who learns of the crime after it is committed and helps the criminal to conceal it, or aids the criminal in escaping, or simply fails to report the crime, is known as an "accessory after the fact".

Ah, I see now. I guess this is why people from different countries shouldn't argue the law. That aspect of accessory is not present in Canadian law. Nothing in Canadian law compels you to report a crime. That is particular to the United States.

Of course, if I were arguing American law, I'd probably not have the little Canadian flag beside my name.

Obstruction:

Basically its giving an authoritative body false information to prevent the investigation from finding the guilty person.

Too bad no authority figure had ever asked for assistance or information.

Exactly.

Because you are acting in the capacity of the companies employee.

If you baked them at home and put nuts in, the company would have no blame.

Whoops, I guess I'm at fault for forgetting that Canada has different legal definitions than we do. Sorry about that. However, considering n00bstories and RenGuard are operated in the United States, I would assume that they are subject to the laws of the United States. Renegade itself is a product from the United States, and it conforms to its laws as well. Therefore, according to EA's EULA for Renegade:

Quote:2. COPYRIGHT AND RESTRICTIONS. [...] You also may not copy, modify, adapt, translate, create derivative works of, publicly perform, publicly display, distribute, transmit, decompile, disassemble or otherwise reverse engineer or attempt to reverse engineer or derive source code from, all or any portion of the Product or anything incorporated therein, including any screen display, sound or accompanying documentation, or permit or encourage any third party to do so. [...] Further, if the Product contains a map or level editor, you may use the editor in accordance with the instructions in the accompanying documentation to create maps or levels for your personal use and enjoyment, and you may allow others to use such maps or levels for their personal use and enjoyment, but in no event may such maps or levels be exploited commercially in any manner, by you or any other person or entity. [...]

4. GAME SERVERS. [...] The only authorized method of accessing any server to use the Product is by using an unmodified copy of the Product as distributed by or for EA. You shall select and then use any such server all at your sole cost, expense and risk, including any communication costs, such as telephone charges and/or Internet access fees.

5. APPROPRIATE GAME PLAY; RESPONSIBILITY FOR GAME PLAY. You agree to not take any action or pass any communication, either in or through the Product, that interferes with another player's ability to enjoy his or her play of the game or which is objectionable or inappropriate. [...]

Technically, even though EA hasn't pursued any legal action against BHS, server owners, and mod makers for creating scripts.dll modifications/core patches/RenGuard/serverside mods/etc., or for creating/using cheats to ruin games, they could if they felt it was worth their time and expense, which I believe is not currently the case. EA could also formally endorse certain modifications and their use/incorporation, but I have yet to see any such endorsement. Also, should EA ever wish to have knowledge of the internals of RenGuard or any serverside modification that may include code intended for improper use (since their mere existence is a violation of the license agreement), or any information regarding derivative issues (e.g. hidden agendas, backdoors, exploits), if someone receives a court order requesting the production of documents, withholding such information would indeed constitute an Accessory and/or Obstruction charge. However, there is no telling whether it would ever come to that, and although possible, it's unlikely.

If my logic is flawed, please correct me. Also, feel free to split this discussion into a new thread if you wish, since we've gone a bit off-topic (although it's not like this thread can be improved anyway).

I'm not sure you could sue them for bypassing RG as, since I stated before, unless I misunderstand how it works (very easy since I know nothing about that), its existence is also technically illegal unless EA gave you the go-ahead.

Meh, I'm just as much at fault for not realizing America had a different definition.

Oh, all that is true, and the logic is not flawed. There may be some exceptions to that rule, relating to the "greater benefit of enjoyment" (my own term, I forget the more appropriate one) but I don't want to get into semantics like that. The same with dealing with Internet-based jurisdictions/registered offices, etc. When no crime has actually been committed (I know that we are using criminal examples, but at the end of the argument they mean nothing other than to illuminate like-circumstances)

All I'm trying to argue is that despite what SK may have done, should BHS be punished for SK's actions as well?

Quote:Are you going to quote yours truly to prove me wrong or do you acknowledge that I won an internet?

I didn't forget about you, I just missed the post.

Quote:Please quote where I say so. I'm talking about losing the trust of the people, not legal actions.

I'm not specifying legal actions (that's just a similar circumstance that relates to this), I'm talking about blame, be it in the form of lost trust, legal actions, or any other sort of punitive act.

But to answer your question directly, you gave the "improved" analogy, and ended off by stating "I sure as hell wouldn't buy there."

You're putting the blame on the business for the actions of a person who happens to work there. I'm saying that there is no blame to be put on the business as the person did not do anything wrong in the name of the business. Did something wrong, yes... but not under the guise of the business he works for.

I cared when SK and crimson tried to hide it--when SK flamed angel6 and others for pointing out that he cheated (saying things like "WHERE'S UR PRROOF LOL UR SO FUCING DUMB GROW UP KID") and when Crimson admitted to angel that she knew SK was using exploits but she tried to deny it to the public. He leaked important information that was said not to be leaked multiple times. This information could be used to create worse cheats than most of you have seen (unless you made them yourself). I have created these and have never let anyone read the code, however we talked about it with the coders and apparently Dead6re felt he needed to share this information. If you are doubting about BI because of something else, please tell me what that is, as I am sure that at least the admins of BI are clean and trying their best to be as good as possible to the renegade community.

About Renguard, it is not possible to make a 100% cheatproof system as it runs on the client. I'm pretty sure it is being made as good as the coders can get it to work. I too think the support for the current version is not that good, however I do seriously wonder how you can say anything about the new version which is yet to be released... If you think you can make anything that works better than the next version of Renguard does, then it would be nice to see it in action too. If you think you can easily bypass/hack/whatever it when it is out, please share that information with the coders of it as it might be fixable then.

As for calling "BHS" retarded for something, you shouldn't consider BHS as one and the same person. Some of team members may in your opinion be retarded, maybe the way BHS handles problems too, however you cannot say the entire team is retarded because of that.

Its because the whole team have overlooked a MASSIVE security hole in rengaurd. in still waiting to see if it gets patched. which will be very hard. in fact, almost impossible.

Everything which was implemented in blackintel.dll (excluding the now unsupported release by Dead6re) is now included in scripts.dll so it should give the same lag... However I can't imagine it causing lag tbh. I'm at least happy to know that it is not for a real reason
If you were talking about Dead6re's release... We don't support that any longer and we will review the code for every other BlackIntel release in the future. It was the only release not done by me I think. Sad that it is needed
