Trainers are bad, mmkay? My best advice is to befriend people in a community or join an active clan. Both present unique advantages/disadvantages but the most important common goal is to better the group by bettering yourself.

If you're competitive ("I play to win!" attitude), join a clan.
If you're leisurely ("I play to have fun!" attitude), join a community.

Personally, I dislike competitive clans, simply because most of the good ones that I have seen are extremely arrogant about it. But they are nonetheless pretty damn good at the game.

He doesn't mean a trainer like what you're thinking, he's talking about a mentor. :\

Even so, a mentor cannot really provide as detailed of a training experience as a clan or community group could.

lol, leme check msn list if he's on line

.: Alex :. www.DistortiaGaming.com¦ Register Or Die! says:
Hey, 3v1?

waits a few seconds

.: Alex :. www.DistortiaGaming.com¦ Register Or Die! says:
I'll take that as a no.

EDIT: typos..
