I was born and raised into Chicago and didn't leave until I left for the military. Then I ended up in Maryland. So:

1st pick: Bears

2nd pick: Ravens

3rd pick: Patriots

Fortunately, my Bears are doing awesome. Ravens got owned by the Colts ... so now I'm going for the Patriots. Hopefully they beat the Colts and it ends up being the Bears vs Patriots. In which case, I think the Bears have it made.

The Bears will lose the Super Bowl. That's pretty much undoubted. You'll see Grossman crack under pressure as he's done several times this year and choke. Brady will be calm and poised, or so will Manning.

The Bears defense would crush either the Patriots or the Colts offense. Moreso the Patriots.

If you've watched the NFC championship you'd see that the Bears hadn't been sacked, forced 4 turnovers (with points on each), and only 1 penalty (which was petty and toward the end of the game). Their shit is tight this season and they're strongly under-rated.

I think the Bears have this, and thats not just my bias; they have a superior team.

Anyway, good game - sucks the Bears lost. If they work on their QB they may just end up in the finals next year too.

Both those teams sucked hard. The Colts just sucked slightly less, it was pretty sad actually. Grossman is a n00b and I always thought manning was a Winny little cunt but after seeing how he was acting when they got that false start penalty ... well I understated him.

WHOA! I don't think so, buddy. I'm a proud Baltimore native and I can DEFINITELY say they didn't get to the Super Bowl by LUCK.

(Can you say 1,364-yard rushing season?). And you forget that our defense is ranked BEST in the NFL. The Ravens broke two Chicago Bears records...which says that the Bears are GOOD, (but the Ravens are better ). The year that we made it to the SuperBowl, we had a 12-4 record. I don't call that luck. We won 34-7...and I also wouldn't call that luck. I'd say that's a good offense AND defense. We have Steve McNair, one of the best QB's in the biz. Granted, our baseball teams sucks...but the Ravens are excellent, a highly favored team and certainly not one-sided.

When they won the Super Bowl, they were certainly one-sided. Their offense was HORRIBLE. Their offense may be getting better now, but it wasn't the case in their Super Bowl year.

Besides this Super Bowl, the 2001 Super Bowl showcased two horrible teams.

I really don't care what anybody says about a team making it to the Super Bowl. The teams that should have ended in the Super Bowl are the Saints and Patriots or the Chargers. The Colts and Bears suck.

Yes, because a last minute field goal means you "owned" that team.

Also, late scoring drives made off of mistakes sure is called "owning" a team, too.

The Bears crushed the Saints, what are you talking about? I'm guessing you're talking about the Patriots/Colts game. And, yes, I was upset because the Patriots were my 3rd overall pick this year.

(Bears, Ravens, Patriots)

But then again, in the previous game, the Colts completely sat on the Ravens ... so I think both the Colts and the Bears made it to the Superbowl fairly and deservingly. I think the weather did have a factor in the game; as well as the fact that Grossman cracked under the pressure because he's not a Superbowl-quality GB. But saying that both teams sucked is a bit of a stretch. They both definitely deserved to play in that game.

(Bears, Ravens, Patriots)

But then again, in the previous game, the Colts completely sat on the Ravens ... so I think both the Colts and the Bears made it to the Superbowl fairly and deservingly. I think the weather did have a factor in the game; as well as the fact that Grossman cracked under the pressure because he's not a Superbowl-quality GB. But saying that both teams sucked is a bit of a stretch. They both definitely deserved to play in that game.

Oh, I meant the Bears' game against Seattle. >.>

If anybody had an advantage with the weather, it was the Bears.

Grossman cracked under pressure because he's not a good quarterback. He was pretty good at Florida, but he was an idiot to leave too soon.

Both teams are not Super Bowl caliber.

SeargentSarg wrote on Mon, 05 February 2007 16:23Overall, I believed Patriots deserved a second chance at this. Last minute field goals are mad cheap.. But they did get in fair and square..

That is the number one reason i hate the patriots.

They have no originality in how they win.

This is how they beat Carolina, Atlanta, Tampa Bay, St. Louis,
And two more teams i cant remember in the playoffs over the years.

Winning by a last minute field goal is not "cheap". I don't see how you can possibly argue that - so I don't think I even need to explain my position here.

The Patriots should have made it....but we can all thank Caldwell for their loss. And possibly Brady's moronic interception in the end...not that it would have made a difference.

My arguement:

I like shootouts.
Games like the 2000-2001 Bills Titans game. (year correct?)
The pass during the kick off was amazing.

Also, games that are like 45-40 or, 32-38.

I just like alot of action in games i gues.

I like how the stans are blaming Grossman when their defence was nowhere near what it claimed to be...NFC sucked more than usual this year, plain and simple.

Thought you all might enjoy this

Bears fan loses bet and must change his name

Quote:

DECATUR, Ill., Feb. 8, 2007

(AP) Scott Wiese, a die-hard Chicago Bears fan, will legally change his name to that of Indianapolis Colts quarterback Peyton Manning after signing a pledge in front of a crowd at a Decatur bar last Friday night. He vowed to adopt Manning's name if the Bears lost Sunday's Super Bowl.

The final score was Colts 29, Bears 17.

So on Tuesday, Wiese went to the Macon County Courts Facility and started the process of changing his name.

"I made the bet, and now I've got to keep it," said the 26-year-old, who lives in Forsyth, just north of Decatur.

Wiese will now have to advertise his intention in the local newspaper _ the Herald & Review _ for several weeks and then have a judge give him the OK to become, legally anyway, Peyton Manning.

The men have little in common, Wiese acknowledges.

Manning the quarterback is 30 years old, stands 6-foot-5 and has a contract with the Colts worth more than $100 million.

Wiese is 5-foot-11 and works at a Staples office-supply store for somewhat less.

"I think I kind of represent all Bears fans," he said. "Not that I'm saying they're all idiots like me, but I represent their passion because I really care about my team, you know?"

While he pledged to take on the new identity, Wiese didn't make any promises about how long he would keep it.
