I'm not sure about the USA and other european countries, but in the netherlands it is legal to download movies and music. Though you may not upload them ...

How the hell do you download them then?

It's legal as long as the hosting company has permission. If you stream the video it's 100% legal although the more you stream the more change the hosting company will find out and remove it due to a breach in their T&C's.

just goto <http://www.peekvid.com>

They have everything there. I open up my wii opera browser and watch whatever I want without wasting any disc's.

Or www.tv-links.co.uk

That and peekvid are some of my favorites around.

I'm neither attracted to children or men. Have you ever seen animes like Samurai X(Kenshin)? Some of them have good plots to them, the fact that they're animated can be overlooked.

the only anime i have ever watched, was dragonballz and gundam wing i think it was called. and that was about 7 years ago or so, were good times i must say. but now i dont really have time for tv, i have to have a full schedule or i will just sit there and smoke weed with my firnedz (not necessarily a bad thing) but i need to get back in shape and the munchies arent helping lol.

I am sure HBO wouldn't like that website giving out their series for free, since they are showing off Band of Brothers. I own that box set that is shown in an image on their website and it wasn't cheap that's for sure. Seems really sketchy to me...

That's why it's illegal for the company that hosts those videos. The publishers kindly ask for them to remove the video or face the consequences (sue, procecution or site removal).

It's legal for you, the end user because you're only streaming it, so it's only the hosters that get procecuted.

It's the same way here.

The only anime I liked was Dragon Ball Z.

ha, hi iwar!

and i don't host the video's myself.. dailymotion is to lazy to delete em(c'mon they must notice it if they have over a million views) and yes, tvlinks or peekvid are proolly better, i don't care, i just like putting stuff on my site:D

Wow, im worried for all the 12 yr olds on these forums, this is basically a thread for fellow pedo's to meet. Im not suprised to see Reborn here, along with his avatar of turing Havic into a homosexual which im sure he jerks off too. But plz guys, dont make this stop you from continuing to prove my point farther
