I went through the DARE program as well. Like AoBfrost it was an ongoing thing. From... 4th to 7th grade I beleive. It was pretty frivolous for me, I'd never use drugs anyhow. I can't offer any sort of estimate however how effective it was on people who had not made that concious decision and later had the option to do drugs. I don't know very many people who smoke weed.

i see it here on sides of busses all the time. never took it but then again i never went to junior high in north america lol i did once see a cop on some police show on spike tv pull over this methhead and when he went through her purse he found a DARE certification of completion of the course. and he asked her how she could be a meth addict and still have this and she said it was her son's and then he grilled her for about 30 mins on how her son has accomplished more than she ever could while being like 15! personally i think that the program really would dont have much more impact then aducating kids about the effects and the after effects of drugs. i mean you cant force or brainwash a person not to do drugs simply by making them take the course when they were young. most addicts became addicts while being fully aware of the drugs they were taking. so in the end its still the person's decision to do drugs and nothing will stop them from doing it.

Regardless, even if some drugs ARE harmful to human health, that's absolutely no reason to make them illegal.

As for smokers, I don't give a fuck if you want to inhale, but could you refrain from exhaling? Blowing your secondhand smoke and making my clothes smell like shit and bringing that crap into my lungs is BEYOND rude and inconsiderate and I seriously wish you would all die faster from it.

I thought you loved your lungs. :/

I personally never found smoking cigarettes worth the health problems, feeling of addiction, cost, etc. That's why I quit - for the most part...still working on that. =P I can't say no to one when it's once in a blue moon. But you see, then, health problems are mere, the addiction is not there, and the cost is then like nothing. I'm undecided. :rockedover:

100% agree

In ohio where i live they bann smoking indoors, I like to purposly cough, sometimes people respond back and i just say "if your trying to commit suicide, go ahead, but do it far off awayfrom public so they dont die too" or "Get the heck off, your not 100 feet away from the building" and then most people just stand there continuing to smoke.....

I remember taking these classes, and I was just like most of you, like Crimson, about 2 years ago. Now I smoke cigarettes, and weed, mainly.
I'm also quite impartial to a few kind of prescription pills, including xanax, vicodin, lortabs, and somas, just to name a few.
I'll do acid and hallucinogenics on occasion, but very rarely.
I won't do ice, crack, pcp, or heroin.
although, I've also taken quite a liking to cocaine, I try to do that as little as possible, perhaps once a week, and just binge the whole day.
weed is what I stick with mainly though.
I don't mind abusing the fuck out of weed and cigarettes, but for everything else, you NEED to have self control, or you'll end up an addict.
thats how I see it anyways

He used to drink all the time from what I remember, but now he drinks very little. At least, that's what he alluded to the other night.

Just because people have never had drugs doesn't mean that their parents shelter them too much. I'm pretty much about free from my parents but I just choose not to because I don't want to die in 3 years. =P

BTW, my parents have never had a conversation to me about drugs.

BTW, my parents have never had a conversation to me about drugs. I never said that you have to be sheltered to not do drugs. I'm just saying that he has to be pretty damn sheltered to have his view on drugs and their effects.

As for alcohol, drinking it in moderation has some positive health benefits.

Well, no, but I actually enjoy smoking. Can't stand alcohol at all. I can be loud and arrogant without any the help of a nasty solvent.

Well, that's fine. I'll probably never do drugs, either, but your assumptions were just a little off...

I only do 2 things:

Weed; Me and my mate Adam will get a £10 worth, Blaze up, walk along the dock and just laugh about funny times we've had, Then back to his place to stick on Shaun of The Dead and just piss ourselves laughing to sleep.

Alcohol; Bottle of Jack D, Few shots and smoke a few cigs and just have a good one.

Oh, Or Stella Artois.

I doubt I'll ever do cocaine, or E, Or any other drug you'd do on a night out, Otherwise I'd fuck up along the way and end up in the Hospital with a needle in my heart pumping me with Artificial adrenaline to get me heart starting, rofl, Now that would be a memory.

Marijuana, liquor and smokes. I count three.

Personally, I think that marijuana should be legal, right along with liquor and tobacco, but people should have to take a short course to educate you about the potential dangers of the products, and safe use of them before you would be allowed to purchase them.

It's the people's responsibility to educate themselves. I'm against government spending for that. If private organizations want to open up discussion and have classes, by all means, but fuck no to government funding on that.

Edit: Unless you charge for mandatory sessions that cover ALL of the costs.

Edit edit: Nevermind, that's still government controlling you.
