I need a job, I had one but it was bullshit after bullshit so I quit. Now I need a new one, preferably not retail. What do you think I could do?

Hmm... try to work at a place that isn't a franchise. I work at one of those places and it's really neat.

Why does Viking always seem to go back and forth from intelligent postings to unintelligible postings? I've always noticed it, but everybody else seems to ignore that fact...

I'm going to go ahead and assume that he's not as dumb as we would like to think sometimes...

You can't enlist in the Army before you're 18. You can pre-enlist, but that doesn't count.

You can enlist at the age of 17 and go through basic, but you can't do anything else until you turn 18.

You're not enlisting, and you're exercising - but it's not boot camp or anything really important. At least that's what I picked up.

You are. Basic Training is the first step into the military after you've signed the contract; its the 9 weeks where you get infantry training and all other basic training. For instance, my recruiter is having my friend go to basic this summer, and after basic (he turns 18 during basic) he will assume is job on base as soon as he is done with basic.

I was down to walk a little over four miles to a job, and then back. They just didn't want to hire me.

I can think of three possibilities:

- 1) some one else know his password and acts like an idiot on his user name, and he doesn't notice because he only posts on certain topics.
- 2) He has a split personality, and swaps in between them on a regular bases.
- 3) He types what he thinks, and doesn't read it over, and doesn't care.

There are probably a lot more.

If you're looking for something soul-sucking and awful, try telemarketing. Just finishing a two-year stint at a shitty call center, but hey, it pays well.

Eh, telemarketing. Not the most desired job, but I have to agree with xptek, it usually pays more than minimum wage.
