I do not have a camera, also ATI is fail and Nvidia is win.

@Crimson is that monitor on the far right LCD or is it CRT? Can I have your keyboard?

The last 3 video cards I had were ATI and they all melted, then I got an Nvidia, it melted, and now this Nvidia isn't melting so that's 3 to 1!

Actually, they weren't all my cards, they were my dad's too, and it was over a period of 6 years. They al melted because of defects and faulty fans, there was no overcloclong involved.

Okay, end of discussion, back on topic.

My desk is the same as it was the last time except I have a 19" LCD monitor and im using the old 19" CRT for mIRC. So there isn't a point of taking a picture.

Edit:

Yeah, but the cd drive on the black comp is out of the bottom one. I needed the drive to install windows on the black one. I just never put it back. Thats why the black one and the bottom one doesn't. The computer with the black writing on (the one on the left) has its side somewhere at the bottom of a big pile of stuff. I just can't be botherd getting it.

It's a 5.1 sound system, it's connected to the bass which serves as a hub for the speakers, however since the iMac only has a stereo output I can't plug in the other cables I'd plug into, say, my old tower that has an Audigy 4. So I'm only hearing sound from the front L & R speakers and the bass - center and rear L & R are disabled.

Oh ok I understand. Couldn't you get some other sound card? like a cheap creative 5.1? I don't know how Imacs works so :s

No since you can't open it up. And even if you could there'd be no space to put a PCI sound card in there let alone a port to plug it into.

The soundcard on all macs by default is onboard. Only the Mac Pro and G5 Pro can install new soundcards and they have to be PCI-e ones.
