Untrue. It just became a joke policy once people found out how to bypass the RG ban. But i suposet he new RG put a hold to that .

I always thought it was pure sarcasm, Punk Puster and VAC = You can't pay them to be un-banned.

But sadly I followed along with it. D:

Maybe so but its to my understanding that you can purchase either from punkbuster or EA a new serial (Of whatever that use to ban people from) for something stupid like $10.

It started off as a serious policy but most Renegade players are young and broke. We had hoped to use the policy to help defray the costs of running the master servers. That amount of money was also a token sum to induce the player to not try and bypass RenGuard again and get the ban put back on.

However you want to put it, I spend rather a lot of money to keep RenGuard up and running (such as it is) and if money finds its way into the BHS PayPal account, I'm going to use it to help pay the server bills.

why does it cost money to keep a server running?
what exactly is a paid-server?
who does the money go to?
do you have to keep your computer on all the time.

It costs $150 a month to rent a dedicated server. With it you get a fast computer with remote desktop and a fast connection speed.

ROFL the price depends on several factors, including bandwidth allowed, processor speed, RAM, hard drive size/type... and a lot more. There is no magic fixed price. None of MY servers cost $150. They are hosted in a high-uptime data center with redundant power and network which minimizes downtime to almost zero.

My total server bill every month is about $480, over half of which is BHS-related expense, and the rest is n00bstories or personal.

I don't think i recall anywhere saying it was a fixed price, and in fact, there are few servers you can rent for the $150 range.

As was mentioned - the fee was aimed at young (broke) players - so $30 would be a lot of money to them - and hence act as a deterrent or at least minimise the reoffences.

I'm all for a % of someone's salary though. How about 10%?
