I have enabled the "Aliases" feature on the forum. This either came in the upgrade I just did or I just discovered that it was added in a prior upgrade.

If it's abused, I'll turn it back off, but at least this should stop people from asking me to change their nicks all the time. It's in the Control Panel, I'm sure you can find it.

Yep, I broke the theme... damn it. Stay tuned.

[Edit: Phew, good thing I have a backup the style sheet... all better!]

It worked fine for a few minutes, I changed my alias and looked at one of my posts on the old theme.

Also, I never knew the smiley had headphones. D:
And the has !!! above it!

Maybe someone could change the black details to white so they show up.

I had been meaning to get my name changed, anyways. This will work.

I also set the cookie/session expiration times as high as they can go... I hope it helps.

Someone might comment on the edit button but I don't think it's worth your time to fix.

The edit button? You're allowed 30 minutes to edit your posts... what else do I not know about?

As long as people don't change their avatar, I'll recognise them .

I fiddled with MOD_REWRITING everyone to the same forum (which should make search results better/accurate for Google and whatnot), and I twiddled around with the cookie settings and used leet Firefox tools to check what was being set. I hope that it will improve the whole cookie aspect for everyone.

(It does mean you may have to log in one more time to set the new cookie)

I like my little title.

It sounds cool

Also, what do you think of my new username?

Vive la resitance!

Hasta la vista!

etc.

Also, I wouldn't like to be Ancient_and_forever, you'd have to pay one hell of a lot of tax. D:

I've been going by Jecht for around a year or two now in other places. It's pronounced "Jet" for those of you who think it may look weird.
