I saw the title of this subforum has changed . No more "Politics and hot issues" . Though the current title fits this subforum better, I still find it a loss.

It was a bit of shock when I first saw it. I thought the forums had undergone a major change. Meh, we'll get used to it.

We created the forum during the last US elections, if I remember right, so it was mostly politics we argued. I thought the new name would better reflect the current usage.

This might be the best topic in which to point out the minor typo within the forum's title.

Err no :>

Its Argument not Arguement. Yes i know its Argue, but in argument the 'e' is gone.

Phew... I've been so confused. I've seen like three topics about the "misspelling" and I'm like... "I don't see it! Ahhh!" Now I can rest easy again...

Right.

However, he does bring up a valid point. Some of the time, when you have a word like that, the 'e' is kept in the British spelling, but dropped in the American spelling.

While this word doesn't qualify, a word like Judgement (British)/Judgment(American) does.
