That's completing 400 games (complete games give you 15 tickets). The games' lengths depend on your vocabulary skills and/or your Google-Fu.

Im completing a game of chicktionary every 6-8 min, and it's 20 points a game. If I played for 24 hours a day I could get 3360 points. In about 48 hours I could have myself a copy of vista . Problem is that I would have no life, even online.

Type in all the letters shown to you and just start typing the words into the game. I get 160~ points every 15 minutes. Unfortunately I don't have the patience to do this for 8 hours.

35000 tickets for a 360...

With Dave's point gaining rate, that's 640 points in an hour. That's 54.6875 hours of playing. If you spread out the play time over a time period, say 30 days, that's a lil more than 1.82 hours per day for 30 days.

But therein lies the patience problem... I think I'll check out a few games to see how much patience I have.

Well, with chickster and anagrammer.com, 20 points per game comes quickly. Trouble is, that's 1750 games I need for the 360... I had a friend try to login to my account and do puzzles at the same time, although they said it earned him 0 points. Any other games give you more points per game?

I actually mean a bot, like one that does it for you, i saw a video of one guys attempt at it, but it was pretty shit tbh. Kinda like a smart click bot. I though there would be loads since there are allot fo anti microsoft people out there and this promotion is so huge...

I would try and find someone that you trust that lives in the US to receive it, and then ship it for you. You could then pay them for the shipping through paypal. The hard part is getting somone that you really trust.

Well, even if you could get it sent to the UK, I don't know if it would work because the UK is in a different DVD region than North America, so you would probably have to buy all your games from people in North America anyway...

Anyway, usually if these things are successful they extend it to places like the UK and Australia. At least, from experience, they do.

well to those of you that have jobs... you know working some overime would make things go alot quicker. i mean lets assume someone makes 15$ an hour. if you get paid 1.5 times for overtime you make 22.5 an hour. how much does a vista cost? lets say 350$ so that will mean in 15 hours of overtime you get vista! or instead you could play these stupid time consuming games for around 40-50 hours to get if "free".... and even if you do not work overtime you can still make 350$ in 23 hours at 15$ an hour...

Dude, I get paid 21 pound an hour, thats 42 USD an hour. I am finishing an eight hour shift soon, and have spent six hours of it playing these games...

Even if they was paying me 1000 dollars an hour I would still do it if I could get away with it (employee of the month I know ).

I gained credits at a rate of approx 1000 per hour(ish), if you can take advantage of something, then you would be an idiot not too.

Plus... Any excuse to take some of my money back off bill gates I will do. I would rather work twice as hard to rob him of something then half as hard and line his pockets.

That's all fine and dandy, but I don't want to pay $350 for an operating system that I can get for free. I could use $350 for something more constructive, like college money.

I could make $400 (for the 360) in 24ish hours, or I can earn 35000 points in 54 hours, getting the 360 for free.

I think I'll take the money I earn teaching kids and spend it on fun stuff, like air pistols and ammo, or a car, and spend my lonely nights when I'm bored anyway tryin to win a 360 instead of doing other time-wasting activities...

It may have been that 6000 was a typo and they pulled it after realizing that people were spending at minimum a few hours and getting their free copies.

Nevermind, they put up a limited number of prizes, and then they are won. It seems that they are adding some of the prizes that were there back, and then some. I have 6,000 tickets so if it comes back I can nab it real quick.

If it's the wireless one, you'll have to go out and get the wireless receiver.

I've tried the other games, but I don't have the patience. It doesn't matter though, I have Vista Business and that's good enough.
