Firstly a statement is made.

Quote: "A couple are dead on the floor of a room. A dog is trying to get out of the room."

Secondly, it is followed by

Quote: "What Happened?"

YOU have to work out what happened. You must ask questions relating to the crime / accident scene. The game master (Me) are only allowed to answer yes or no to your questions.

FOR EXAMPLE:

Good Question:

Quote: Did the dog kill the couple?

YES

Quote: Are the couple human?

NO

Bad Question:

Quote: How did the couple die?

I cannot answer yes or no to this question and so it will be ignored .

Look at other people's questions too. That way you can put together a scenario of what happened. Remember, the best question is the question you want to ask. The questions can be anything, however it would be silly to ask stuff like "Have they just eaten" cause it wont get you anywhere in your investigation.

If you think you have planned out what happened, post your scenario.

Quote: I think that the couple are two puppies and were accidentally killed by the dog because, as they weren't his / hers, they were intruders and so the dog probably killed them.

Once again, I will answer yes or no to this question.

In this case, NO.

You aren't out of the game. You can use other people's scenarios to get other ideas for your own scenario.

3.Is the Dog a large breed that could have easily killed the couple on its own.
4.Was there any sign of a rush to remove themselves from the house.
5.Were there any signs that they owned a dog(dog food, scratched up carpet etc)
6.Was it their dog?
I could make a neverending list if you'd like.

My guess so far is that they locked themselves in somehow and the dog out of pure starvation killed them. Mind you, a dog wouldn't kill it's master without alot of motivation, or if was tortured by the owner that would be a different stroy, or then again that may make the dog more loyal. But if it isn't their dog it could be a stray, or someone trying to kill them trained one up. Dont put a yes/no on this paragraph.

7.Did they have a will setting out profit mainly to someone.
8.Were they on a will so that when they were killed, their share would be given to someone else (when the owner of the will died).
9.Were they rich with money, shares, solid profits etc

Do the example questions apply to this scenario? I'm guessing not since they're marked as examples, so I'll ask them.

Did the dog kill the couple?

Are the couple human?

The chances are that it is similar to the answer but not quite as in it is not how it happened.

The examples that are marked YES are true.

Perhaps the dead couple are a couple of roaches. The dog accidentally set off one of those bug fogger bombs which killed the roaches, and since the dog senses the harmful scent, he tries to get out of the room.

Oh, this one is starting to sound familiar now.

The dog accidentally knocked over a fishbowl, knocking the couple of fish out, which then died of asphyxiation.

That doesn't explain why the dog is trying to get out, though.

Or maybe it knocked the fishbowl on purpose to drink the water, and after the fish suffocated, the dog had to go piddle, thus explaining it trying to get out.
