Well, I have looked and looked, and think I found the ones I want. I wanted them with a microphone, but you cant have perfection so I will just settle for these.

Logitech don't make good heaphones in my opinion. They just feel cheap, sound cheap and are made from what look like cheap parts.

Sennheiser however make good quality gear, however I have a pair of Sony MDR-V500 phones, which are very good for their price.

I would highly recommend my Creative HS-600. They have incredible bass. Im on to my second pair within 2 years because I kept running over the wire with my chlar. But now that i've been more careful, they haven't caused me any problems at all.

Edit:

Them logitec headphones that gozy has really hurt my ears when I put them on, (My brother use to have them) I really wouldn't recommend those.

Strange, they don't hurt my ears at all and I'm wearing glasses. They're actually very comfortable and keep my ears nicely fresh.

About them feeling cheap, I don't have a clue where u got that from :-S. Maybe a cheap model?

I guess it's all personal preference .

Whenever I put them on it felt like they were really pushing against my ears and it began to hurt somewhat. Also the mic on them headphones cannot be moved except up and down. (So if it doesn't fit your head properly the mic can get really annoying.

Have a look at these.

Headphone perfection. I'm on my third pair. I will continue to buy these things till the cows come home. They are awesome AND not expensive.

Headphone perfection. I'm on my third pair. I will continue to buy these things till the cows come home. They are awesome AND not expensive. I have the same pair. The only issue I have with them is that the two wires under your chin likes to twist themselves together and it's very irritating.

I presume this is because of the material it's made of. I've had to resort to regularly wearing them with the wire behind me because of that. The sound quality is actually pretty good, given the price.

I like the Sennheiser ones a lot because:

- 1: They surround the ear, not sit on it.
- 2: The wire is removable
- 3: They look pretty heavy duty.

I dunno.

I use these. I don't use headphones very often, so I just needed something comfortable with a mic suitable for TeamSpeak. I have eczema so those headphones that surround the ear usually make me sweat, which leads to itch, which leads to unhappy Crimmy. These are lightweight and don't squeeze or anything.

Well, I pretty much ALWAYS use headphones, so I want some half decent sound, and those look like they would break easy too.

Are these just for playing games, or will you be listening to a lot of music through 'em? I spent a decent amount looking for good headphones, because many pumped out too much bass, and not enough mid/high-range sound. If you can, bring an MP3 player where you go shopping, and see if you like the sound, before you buy.

I use these bad boys...

The noise cancellation is a bonus if your on an airplane often, or if you've just had a bad day at work.

As I said before, look into the Creative HS-600. Loud, Comfortable, Bassy, Long lasting... I could go on all day. My brother has what crimmy has, and tbh its fit swell but the sound quality isn't what i'd call great to say the least.

That pair is decent, but literally everyone I know who owned a pair (including me) had the little microphone protector thing fall off, and afterward, the microphone completely failed.

Also, take a look at this pair: <http://www.fatal1ty.com/products/hardware/#headset>

No thanks, I refuse to buy A-Bit products.
