Yes, but not custom music. It has to be music that everyone already possesses in their game.

Your best bet is to play one of the single player tracks.

something like Command&conquer.mp3 or 10-stomp.mp3

You can get a full list of the songs and their full names using the XCC mixer.

Actually, you can make a 'Music Pack' download for people to install to their Renegade/Data folder. If you're running a jukebox you need to put the music in the RenegadeFDS/Server/data folder and then you can add the tracks to your jukebox to play for clients. ^_~

This is true. But the key is to know that you can take advantage of what people have in their Renegade.

For example, if someone has a music file 123.mp3 in their data folder, and you use the console command "musica 123.mp3" then whoever in the server who has that EXACT name of an mp3 in their Data folder, will hear the music in their game.

So you can do what Webmas7er said, make a music pack, and get people who play your server to download it. Then you basically activate the music in their data folder from the host.
