Alright, I used to be a regular a while back on Renegade, Scrunched was my user name

My computer crashed, so I had to fix it

Anyways, I go to install Renegade, and the game is fine..

But when I install the update it asks me to download so I can play online, it says its 100% complete, and stays like that, nothing new shows up, it just stays like that unless I hit cancel, and when I do that, and Im updating from my desktop, it says one of the files couldnt be matched or whatever, and the update was a failure

Any help with this?

More secure.

Why does no one ever use the auto-update feature?

run "C:\Westwood\Renegade\Renegade.exe GrabPatches"

There's even a link to it in the folder in the start menu...

Auto-downloading a ~23 MB file is a bad idea, especially if it gets cut off for some reason, or if you want to have it on your hard drive in case you have to reinstall again. Use the ftp link provided in Ryu's post.

I did use the auto-update feature from the start menu, it'd do the exact same thing as if I was updating while the game was running.

If I'd hit cancel, then the files would start showing that they were copying, and then the final file wouldn't copy, for some reason or another, and then a message would show up saying the update was not successful

Maybe the auto-updater's broken then. Regardless, just get the manual patch.

That happened to me, you just got to do it again and leave it. If it hasn't done it after 10 minutes then
