shouldn't they atleast wait untill C&C3's expansion(s) come out before even considering doing this. The fact that they're making a saga edition suggests that they're finishing the series by boxing everything (although I know their not)

Silly EA.

Back before westwood died, they released a pack that had tons of the older games and every expansion pack, they had cnc95, cnc tib sun, cnc red alert 1 and 2, and renegade, all with expansion packs included....I almost bought it, but I already had all the games lol

This is a good idea I think. EA is not stupid; this could turn out to be good marketing.

We will have more casual gamers pick up these combos and to many these kind of packages are very economic.

Well, I am waiting for the version of C&C3 that will be released with the expansion pack.

Common people are attracted by bundled things, being slightly more expensive, but more bang for the buck, they will buy it, and after playing cnc3, they will return to the older cnc games, thus creating a lively cnc community again!

Commoners technique!

Why pay 40 dollars for command and conquer 3 WHEN for 50 dollars, you get EVERY cnc game. (except sole survivor...)

They need to make more effort into these things. I didn't buy TFD because they claimed the old games worked in XP when they infact just set compatibility mode on the executables.

I at the same time think this is a bad idea and a good one 1. EA just thinks they can release another tfd +1 game and make money on it and 2. I do agree it might get more ren players and more C&C players which is always a good thing

That was the Command & Conquer Collection (Red box with 5 games, technically three and two expansions), and I have it. That's what got me into Renegade. I only bought that collection because I wanted Red Alert 2, which was no longer being sold. Now I'm into Renegade more than anything else, my brother got into it (barely plays anymore), my friend plays with me when he is over, and he got this girl he knows to buy it (probably TFD) for Renegade. So hopefully...

I never got TFD, and I never got C&C3 yet either, so I won't pass on this. It saves from having to buy TFD and C&C3 plus it's expansion, but I agree, they should wait until the expansion for C&C3 is out and add that.

Anyway atleast I think its good that people are still able to purchase renegade in normal shops now

And then you are left with this problem, it seems that it is really easy to get a lot of the older games. I gotta stop going to garage and yard sales.

I think I might buy it just because it's newer, may support XP fully, since tfd just had xp compatibility set in the exe. Plus it includes cnc3, I have almost all those games already, but their all in one pack, so it makes life easier.

its all just in the aid of making more money.

I find this is a stupid, horrible product.

It is highly unnecessary, smart yes, support of most of the community... maybe not.

They already have TFD, and they don't need another pack with just C&C3 on it.

In my opinion, I think that C&C Saga is just a cover up for the anticipated TFD Patch people have been begging to come out. EA just stuck a game on it and made it cost more money.

If you actually look at this from EA's perspective, you can see that they are just trying to find another way to sell Tiberium Wars. Think about it, other than Generals, all those other games on the pack are Westwood's creations. So they technically aren't losing any money by making a pack of 13 games cost about the same as just Tiberium Wars, because this is really all it is.. JUST Tiberium Wars with those added games as 'extras'

Agreed 100%

Also they just keep selling those packs and making it more and more of a pain on the renegade communities ass. We are going to have to have a Saga registry tutorial and all the rest of that crap.

Wow thats gay, all the old EA haters are gonna come out again. Tbvh, I actually really liked C&C3, and I think EA did a good job with it. That seems so weird typing EA and good in the same sentence but...Its my fav RTS now. It would atleast make sense if they didnt realse this, and instead waiting to release that new kanes wrath expansion for C&C3 which looks intresting, and include that in the package, or just package C&C3, and the expansion as a package

My last hopes with EA are focused on how they manage this new "C&C FPS", if they screw it up.....wow....I won't be a happy camper to say the least
