something I'm thinking of doing.

Once a week, I (or a partner in crime cough tunaman*) would observe a clanmatch or community match between some top players, and I'd take the role of a "commentator", as if it were a sport... giving strategic analysis, saying why the players are doing what they're doing...

might be useful for players to make observations and improve their knowledge of strategy by seeing the "pros" in action, as well as being kinda fun.

I'm all for this.

Except it'll be cool for Renegade to have a replay cam sort of thing but that isn't possible right now...

Good Luck

You mean like C&C3? XD Renegadecommunity.com may be a nice place to announce / host these? I'm all with you in this .

Would you encode it in divx? Put on youtube as well?

Hmmm, neat idea. Slightly off-topic, but I'm Tivo-ing the MLG (Major League Gaming) events this year, and I'm surprised how much analysis and commentary people are able to squeeze out of matches of Halo 2.

Even though action in Renegade may be quite a bit slower compared with Halo 2, I think there is a lot more strategy and tactics to cover. I'm all for this.

I'd be for it if the announcer's voice is radio friendly.

I'd recommend XVID instead, free, open source, and better quality.

I think the major issue is a lack of games...

Also, this topic could benefit from more attention, really it belongs in General Discussion (Or I think it does) - could someone move it there?

Maybe the Field 1v1 Tournament finals would be good for a first try?
