Blazer and I got engaged tonight on our 5-year anniversary. For those of you who aren't super hardcore old-school, Blazer and I actually met on the Westwood-hosted Renegade Forums back in 2002. Blazer did the deed through a series of trivia questions, then a treasure hunt to a specific GPS location, at which point I got a box which I had to decode to open the next clue which told me where to find a gift card to a local jeweler. We're going to pick out my ring this week (probably tomorrow).

And no, we haven't set a date yet, FFS.

For your information, I am at work, and I get to sit here and poke fun at your willful ignorance.

I do live with my parents, but that's only because I continue to go to school to try and make something out of myself, so I don't have to suffer with entry-level jobs all my life as you seem to be heading for. I do plan to be out in January, as my hope is to transfer out-of-state to a university.

Heh... Blazer dressed up as Havoc, Crimson as Sakura. Best man/men and bride's maids as Renegade units in order of their PT cost.

Crimson walking down the isle to Hell March, to the alter officiated by (since it was suggested), Joe Kucan. The ring is delivered via the phrase "I've got a present for ya", with vows given in the style of C&C.

"I promise I will not use cheats, I promise I will stay as your hotty through the thick of battle and never abandon you to save my own life. I promise my K/D ratio will not become an issue to the extent that I quit when things get hard. I promise I will not rush until you are ready. I promise I will not glitch the ob, causing it to misfire, while you attempt to sneak in the rear." (And so on and so forth)

A GDI/Nod "victorious" cheer goes off as they exit the building where the guests throw chunks of jade/green rice.. err, tiberium at the bride and groom.

They hop into their APC and drive off into the sunset as the C4 detonates on the horizon. (A transport helicopter would have worked, but we all know they have the term "flying coffin" for a reason. Not a good way to start a marriage) warranto wrote on Thu, 08 November 2007 19:16 Heh... Blazer dressed up as Havoc, Crimson as Sakura. Best man/men and bride's maids as Renegade units in order of their PT cost.

Crimson walking down the aisle to Hell March, to the alter officiated by (since it was suggested), Joe Kucan. The ring is delivered via the phrase "I've got a present for ya", with vows given in the style of C&C.

"I promise I will not use cheats, I promise I will stay as your hotty through the thick of battle and never abandon you to save my own life. I promise my K/D ratio will not become an issue to the extent that I quit when things get hard. I promise I will not rush until you are ready. I promise I will not glitch the ob, causing it to misfire, while you attempt to sneak in the rear." (And so on and so forth)

A GDI/Nod "victorious" cheer goes off as they exit the building where the guests throw chunks of jade/green rice.. err, tiberium at the bride and groom.

They hop into their APC and drive off into the sunset as the C4 detonates on the horizon. (A transport helicopter would have worked, but we all know they have the term "flying coffin" for a reason. Not a good way to start a marriage)

That would be the coolest wedding ever. But sadly it will likely never happen.

There's no way in hell we would do anything like that, sorry. Most of our friends and family don't even know what the fuck Renegade is.

I am shooting for April because we're not doing an expensive, fancy do and I want to do it before our horribly hot summer settles in. I can't justify dropping 10 grand on a wedding when I could get granite counters in the kitchen or something else for the house. We're going to have a non-formal gathering either in our backyard or in some other location and spend most of the budget on making sure everyone has a good time.

Fiancee... there's an accent aigu on the first "E" but I'm too lazy to figure out how to type one on my American keyboard. And if you're talking about a man who is engaged he is a fiance with the same accent on the "E".

Anyway, I don't really see the need to make a thread about this, but since they both met through forums, I guess it kind of makes sense.

Goes to show how lazy brits are, only a small amount of the population know a language fluent enough to have a conversation. Yet, you know at least 3 and many other foreign people i have met all know at least 2 languages. Heck, some of us don't even know our own language never mind others...

I'm not meaning to go off topic, but meh.
