Long story short, I read in PC world that those online survey/offer sites have to be legit because of legal reasons. Most people, as did now just think all those sites are scams, well to my own shock (and I mean SHOCK), it turned out very legit, full story:

What the crap. This isn't free..

You end up either having to buy something or order something and do work...

tons of offers, but this site 90% of them cost atleast 1$, 10% of em are free tho, I did 2 free ones and 1 payed 1 (some bullshit yahoo marketing, $1.95), only few more offers left for me to do.

The company is perfect legit, check their main site on :

<http://www.trainn.org/>

^^They have been doing this for a VERY long time.

Your end up paying a dollar or something just to get one credit.

Enevitably you'll sign up to one of those physic sites or an on-line gambling site. You'll pay your dollar thinking great, one step closer to my ps3. But the small print of that third party site will say you have to pay a cancellation fee of 30 dollars, or at least enroll for 6 months at 10 dollars a month, or something really gay like that.

Don't do it troop, you will get scammed eventually, or end up making your friends/family/on-line pals get scammed.

The company that is offering the PS3 maybe legit, but you need to look into what they are requesting you to purchase.

TINSTAAFL, troop, TINSTAAFL

Thats what I was thinking, you pay 7$ right now, but once the "trial" is over, you get auto charged fully. Looked into the T.O.S on both the official site and 3rd party sponser sites, and they can't legally even keep your credit card information on file after the x amount of trial period you signed up for, so that won't happen either. The ONLY thing im worried about is getting them done before the busy xmas holiday season, best case, they would have primary dibbs on PS3's but @ $399, they gonna sell like hot cakes, buying 1 from the store is even out of the question for me in my area

This is such an awesome idea. You should get your entire family, and your friends into it as well.
