I did for the longest time until i saw some weird anime shit in my Film class at school. it was called memorium or something and i saw only the magnetic rose part. but it was beautiful.

In conclusion, most anime is gay and will always be gay until the world ends, but this is the one anime movie that i can say i liked.

I think most of the shit they have now is gay, but there were some good shows on back in the day (2003 and down). Now there is just junk on Cartoon network and 4KidsTv and Kids WB.

DragonballZ ftw.

You sir, have no idea what your talking about...

Let me explain why:

both "Girl" and "Boy" respectfully. Their target age ranges to children up to the age 18.

Kodomo is a category for early childhood and basically kids who are still learning to read.

Pokemon, One Piece, Sonic X all fall under the Kodomo category.

Now I'm not disagreeing with you that there are other Animes aimed at Adults. I mean there are

Yea, anime is gay and has more emotions than a dramatic girl, but I do like how they sometimes actually try in the animation, and the effort that is put into the animes.

I do not like anime, man.

I do not like it Sam I am.

Perhaps the scariest thing about it is the furrie subset.
FullSail was full of anime loving weirdos, one of whom actually skipped a final to go to a furry convention. That's a huge no no there, but he felt it was very important to go dress up as a raccoon and sing in japanese.

Cartoons and Anime are 2 different things. Yes they are made the same, but Anime is more specific in how it is made, what goes into it, drawing style, also many people say that it has to be from Japan, but I don't believe that. (Afro Samurai, Avatar, Teen Titans)

It all depends on your tastes. If you just say you don't like Anime and that is it, than you're not being truthful.

By saying you don't like any and all forms of Anime is exactly the same as saying I don't like to watch TV. Which may be true in some cases, but in this case I don't think so.

However, I think your basing your argument off of cartoons made in English, like Loony Toons, Tom and Jerry, Spongebob, ect. Those are COMPLETELY different. The only similarities is that they are made with drawings... that is about it..

And you also said, to which I already responded, "Cartoons for adults, grow up"

So what about Cartoons like Family Guy, South Park, The Simpsons, King of the Hill?

I guess you're right, anime is a art style Japanese style, not animations made in Japan.

But uh... I'm guessing the big eyed basic "Power Puff Girls" style and the complex "FLCL" like style are both different types of anime?

Anime is not all for kids. Not even Naruto Shippuuden is for kids. There's alot of adult themes in it. For instance, here is part of the subtitles of one of the epidodes I downloaded:

Naruto: He attacked me when I was with Shikimaru's team a while ago!
Yamato: Knock it off Naruto-kun.
Yamato: Since you guys are on the same team, it'll cause alot of problems if you don't get along.
Naruto: Same team as him?! (points at Sai)
Sai: I'm Sorry about before. I wanted to know how strong you were, since we're on the same team.
Naruto: You didn't have to go that far.
Sai: Thanks to our little encounter, I learned you're a useless, dickless pantywaist.
Naruto: WHAT WAS THAT YOU ASSHOLE?!

It's a form of animation entertainment. Very popular in its place of origin in Japan, and has spread across the globe to many different countries.

Some anime is good, some is bad. Just like some cartoons are good and some are bad. Or shows with real actors. I wouldn't base my decision on just the way they choose to tell the story :/ .

It's also how I really dislike poetry, but not all is bad.

Look at it this way:

Secondly: Anime should be seen by everyone who makes a post in this thread before posting a "OMG ITS LIEK TEH W0RST SH17 EVAR!" response.

Thirdly: +1 and Rocko is a troll.

I just don't like how some people think, "Wow, kids and geeks watch; therefore, it must suck" without giving it a chance.

O RLY.

http://www.manga.co.uk/

Pff, kids trying to be a smart ass around me, I was reading and watching manga, when most of you wasn't even born.
Well, ya rly. Just cause that website is named "manga" doesn't mean you can watch a book. I mean... of course you can watch a book, but that be kinda dull and boring, no?

Look at it this way:
Anime is the animated form of a Manga.

Let's not.

Anime is westen made crap like pokemon, this covers books and tv.

Manga is jap made of ownage, this covers books and tv.

Enough said.

I can't even begin to tell you how wrong you are.

First of all Anime isn't western made, it is made in Japan. Pokemon is Japanese, not western.

Manga is a "Graphic Novel" it is a book. Anime is the ANIMATION of the book.

If you don't believe me I will show you:

This is the original Manga version of InuYasha (Episode 1)
http://www.onemanga.com/Inuyasha/1/01/

This is the InuYasha official website:
http://www.avexmovie.jp/lineup/inuyasya/index.html

Scroll down on this page to see all the names and languages that the original JAPANESE show was dubbed into.
http://www.animenewsnetwork.com/encyclopedia/anime.php?id=159

Full Metal Panic:

On this page you can see all the Manga on sale, then scroll down you can see the Anime on sale.
http://www.justmanga.com/browse.cfm?anime=Full%20Metal%20Panic

This is the Naruto Manga version of Episode 1

http://www.onemanga.com/Naruto/0/

This is the official Naruto website:
http://www.tv-tokyo.co.jp/anime/naruto/

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Naruto Read the side bar, you can see that it was created in Japanese, and licensed in English! And something "western made" not be licensed in English?!

Bleach:
Episode one of Bleach
http://www.onemanga.com/Bleach/1/

http://www.bleachportal.net/
This site gets the weekly airings of Bleach from Japan and streams them on their site. Later on they are fansubbed in English. Note what episode they are up to: 152.

In English, they where only able to get up to episode 42.

GitS. (Ghost in the Shell)

No online scans, so here:
http://www.animenewsnetwork.com/encyclopedia/manga.php?id=1590

Look at the staff. Why would the English companies need a "translator."
And why doesn't either company, Japanese or English, need any voice actors? Don't say they haven't hired them yet, this Manga was made in 1989.

Same site under the Anime form:
http://www.animenewsnetwork.com/encyclopedia/anime.php?id=910

Notice all the staff members? Those are all the voice actors for the animated series.

In conclusion, this is how it works.

Manga is made in Japan. If a manga is popular, is licensed and distributed as an English translated Graphic Noval. A manga is a Graphic Novel, or something similar to a comic book. Go to a book store and look under "Graphic Novels" you can see for yourself.

Anyway, after the Manga, if it gets enough publicity and people like it, they decide to make it into an Anime. Keep in mind that this is still in Japan. If the Anime receives enough attention, than some other out of country licensees might notice it.

finished up the 14 episode series The Melancholy of Haruhi Suzumiya. (or Suzumiya Haruhi no

So yea, a licensee, such as VIS Media licenses a Japanese Anime, than a distribution company steps in, such as FUNimation, ADV Films, Bandai Entertainment, ect, step in with their cast of English voice actors and they create the episode audio dubs. Which they then sell off monthly as DVDs.

Like I said before, I don't know where you got the idea that Anime was western created, but I can tell you right now, it isn't. I have been following releases of shows for the past 2 and a half years, I know what I am talking about when I say Manga isn't Animated.

And if you even still do not believe me. Do this:
Go to a store and buy an actual Anime DVD. Chances are pretty high that it will include the original Japanese audio with English Subtitles. Now tell me something: Why does something that you say is "western made" have ORIGINAL Japanese audio?

Edit: I only used English translations as an example. Other languages follow the same steps, not just from Japan to English.

In conclusion, most anime is gay and will always be gay until the world ends, but this is the one anime movie that i can say i liked.

Anime is for lonely kids who's childhood entailed molestation etc etc..

Basically, cartoons for "grown ups"? Are you fucking kidding me? Grow up.

See here you are again talking about shit you don't know. There's a huge difference between cartoons like Tom and Jerry and then anime like GITS.

You and Lone need to grow the fuck up. Its not my fault you both were in sexually abusing homes and feel the need for a 2nd childhood. The rest of us pay taxes so you can go whine to some proffesional about your many problems, and not draw cartoons at the age of 10+. Thanks.

You have something you'd like to get of your chest? Also please do explain how everyone that watches something like South Park or The Simpsons was sexually abused.

Once again you've shown that you really are just an idiotic child that doesn't have many friends outside his computer monitor.

I just don't get anime.

It's one of those things that I'll watch if it's like, 4 AM and I can't go to sleep. But even then it bores me to death.

Why do I want to watch some Japanese freakazoid with some stupid superpowers live a normal life when I could be out living mine?

You can't just generalize it all into one category. It is the same thing with normal TV. Can you say that every TV show in the US or UK is a game show?

The truth is there are hundreds of different types of topics an anime can be about.

Anime's just like every other show out there. There's stupid overdramatic shit, and then there's good stuff to watch.

It's just animated and Japanese. Personally, I find animated shows to be much more entertaining. Last I checked, The Simpsons, Family Guy, South Park, and all that are all animated. But somehow, they're among the most populer TV shows.

But hey, I guess reality TV is much better than that. Disregarding the fact that it's about as real as a cockroach killing the core defender.

Have you seen the second season of GITS? Ghost in the Shell 2nd GIG?

As Iron pointed out, Claymore is also good.

I liked 2nd Gig sooooo much better than the original series.

As for suggestions... it is hard to really say without knowing your own likes.

My personal favorite is Neon Genesis Evangelion, however watching that series is like doing drugs... without the drugs.

Another one of my favorites is the FMP seriess.

Full Metal Panic. (No relation to Fullmetal Alchemist) It is about a secret organization called Mithril, which is an organization of Mercenaries that are like international peace keepers. They don't align themselves to any one country, and the faculty is of different origins.

The story is about the anti-social Sergent Sousuke Sagara, who has lived his entire life on the battlefield. Him and his team are assigned to protect a school girl named Kaname Chidori. His team members Sergent Curtz Webber (Sniper), and Sergent Major Melissa Mao (team leader) work the background while Sagara is to infiltrate the school and become a classmate of Chidori's.

Kaname isn't supposed to know that she is being watched. However because of Sagara's anti-social personality, he doesn't know how to cope in a civilian environment and one accident leads to another accident and also leaves some misguided accusations.

Over all, Full Metal Panic is a Military, Mecha, Romantic, Comedy type anime. There are 3 series. The first series (Full Metal Panic!)is 24 Episodes long. The second (Full Metal Panic? FUMOFFU) is 12 (I think) episodes long. And the third (Full Metal Panic! The Second Raid) is 13 episodes long.

The 1st and second series are the action series, the second one is more of a school base comedy.

It is still a good show and I suggest you watch it.

Here is the trailer for the first series:
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=LDr--VxBK1g
(I really don't think that trailer does the series justice because it is kinda confusing.. the actual series is so much better than what they show there)

Here is the trailer for FUMOFFU:
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=iMuV7NWKE6A

And here is the trailer for TSR:
http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=P2a1AlCjVEA

Blah. That is retarded just like most of the new anime. Stuff like Dragon ball Z is good. The old YuGiOhs were good. Me and my brother used to go over to a friends house when were littler. Him and his younger brother (coincidentally our ages) introduced us to cartoon network and that thing that they had at 4 to 6. Back in the early 00s it had good anime, now just crap is on it.

They have already reviled some of the cast members such as Goku, Piccalo, ChiChi, Bulma, Yamcha, and Mai.

The thing is though, anime receives this generalization stereotype outside of Japan that it doesn't really deserve.

Anime that is licensed and aired outside of Japan usually fits that stereotype and that's what fuels the rage.

The fact is, unless you just dislike animation entirely or dislike sitting through stories (in which case you would also be the type of person who skips over single player modes in videogames), then there is an anime out there that you will like. If you like to watch TV, then there is an anime that is on the same exact subject of the TV show you like (unless it's like a reality/game/contest show like American Idol or Who Wants to be a Millionaire.)

If you like serious shows, then there are serious anime. If you like science fiction, then there is something for you. Comedies, romances, crime dramas, ect, ect.... there is something that you will like if you just give it a shot.

Anime that is licensed and aired outside of Japan usually fits that stereotype and that's what fuels the rage.

The fact is, unless you just dislike animation entirely or dislike sitting through stories (in which case you would also be the type of person who skips over single player modes in videogames), then there is an anime out there that you will like. If you like to watch TV, then there is an anime that is on the same exact subject of the TV show you like (unless it's like a reality/game/contest show like American Idol or Who Wants to be a Millionaire.)

If you like serious shows, then there are serious anime. If you like science fiction, then there is something for you. Comedies, romances, crime dramas, ect, ect.... there is something that you will like if you just give it a shot.

..and no matter what show it is or what the show is about, the breast sizes ALWAYS exceed reality.
yeah that shit always bugged me

Even Cowboy Bebop and Ghost in the Shell have that, despite being otherwise awesome shows.

No, that isn't true.

From what I've seen, most girls are small to flat chested. However, I do admit that unless it's a running gag, boinging breasts are pretty annoying. It is a bit of an overused character design with excessively large breasts... but for the most part, most female characters are normal to below average sizes.

It really isn't a big deal in Cowboy Bebop because that's just Fye's character... and to be honest, they are pretty much average size. In GitS though, it is annoying.

There is a good martial arts show called Kenichi: The Mightiest Disciple. It's a good action/comedy and one of the running gags is that the main female character has huge boobs and other characters make fun of her. Even though it's an annoying character design, the comedy aspect sort of balances out.
[/boobs]

Another thing that urks me are excessive pantie shots or 'pantsu'.

LOL was the guy who narrated that Chris Sabbot? It sounds like him.

He is a FUNimation VA. In DBZ, he played Piccolo and Vegeta as well as a lot of other people.

And no, it does not 'spoof the entire anime genre.'

First of all anime isn't a genre. There are different genres of anime. You cannot see one and justify the rest as the same thing. It would be like calling book reading a genre.

It was a spoof of overused echii/hentai clichés.

the red hair shit, I meant still an annoying generic tsundere loli character, not unlike the thousands in every other forgotten animu

Subject: Re: anyone else think anime sucks?

No she isn't generic... because she actually fits the profile. She is supposed to have the build of I think a 12 year old girl. (She isn't 12, but her appearance doesn't change with age. They never really say her age.. so I'm just going off of assumption)

Why I mean by 'not generic' is that the doesn't have ginormous boobs.

I was trying to find a better full body shot before, but they are all versions with flaming hair.

...speaking of which, red hair isn't a weird color... it's a natural color.

crimson, no

There's a good amount of examples of animu characters that don't have ginourmous boobs and are still pretty badass and somewhat developed interestingly, but shana isn't one of them.

A lot of anime has a maturity level that's equivalent to a live-action movie.

Watching Pixar as an adult is pathetic unless you are watching it with kids.

Anyone wondering why people watch anime, watch this:

It's for the attention to artistic detail, something you most definitely will agree that is difficult to find in western cartoons, or even movies.

First, prove yourself right. You gave one example of attention to artistic detail; that doesnt mean its an integral part of anime or a reason why lots of people watch anime.

People like anime because most are more "dramatic" I guess than other cartoons. They can do more crazy things without it looking retarded (see: live action TV shows), so it flows better.

If there were as many serious western shows as there were anime, people would watch those, too. But there aren't- almost all of the western cartoons are aimed at children, or are just humor and nothing more.

I didn't say Pixar was anime. I was saying it in reply to Crimson.

Pixar releases computer animated movies that are for g-rated audiences. Basically kids and family movies.

I was saying it would be pathetic (using the word she used) for a grown adult to develop an addictive fix to watching Pixar movies (as opposed to a grown adult who watches anime that may or may not be meant for a child audience, depending on what they are watching).

Ryu wrote on Fri, 09 July 2010 13:47I could argue with most of you, but I would find it easier to call you ignorant.

That used to be my old argument as to why people tend to hate on anime. But I've since come to a realization that really discredits that idea.

Deep in everyone's core, there lies different sets of preferences. One person's preference might totally conflict with another person's preference. It's very similar to personality traits. For example, someone my be an extrovert and can only feel comfortable if they are around other people; where as someone else might be an introvert and only be comfortable by themselves.

Anyway, I came across this realization actually when I was playing the game Mass Effect.

Mass Effect is a single player game. It has an excellent story and addictive gameplay. However, that got me thinking, if this game is so great, why doesn't every gamer play it? Why are there some people who dislike it? I thought about it and then I realized that there is a line drawn between types of gamers. You have your single player campaign gamers and then you have your multiplayer competitive gamers.

Multiplayer gamers come in all shapes and sizes but it is not uncommon to find one who cannot stand playing a single player game. In fact, my cousin, who got me playing Modern Warfare 2, told me that he never even bothered with the campaign because it's too boring to sit through.

Anyway, relating back to your argument. While ignorance does play a major roll (since most people who hate on anime do it without having bothered to give it a half-decent chance), it isn't the main reason. Some people just don't like to sit through a story, no matter how good we might think it is or how good it might have been rated. Some people just prefer action than to a slow-paced story.

GEORGE ZIMMER wrote on Fri, 09 July 2010 14:41People like anime because most are more "dramatic" I guess than other cartoons. They can do more crazy things without it looking retarded (see: live action TV shows), so it flows better.

I wouldn't say that people like anime because it's more dramatic but rather because drama is a possible choice in genre.

There are tones of different genres that an anime can be. Some are completely serious, others have comedic twists to them. Others still might make no sense at all.

Saying that people who like anime like it because it's more dramatic is stereotyping the viewers.

People like anime for the exact same reason that you or anyone else might like to go to the movies or watch a TV show; it's fun to watch and it's entertaining based off of their personal preferences in the show's content.

Since when has an animated show translate into 'meant for little kids?' Just because it might be animated drawings, doesn't mean it has to be a kid's entertainment program. If someone was to take a show like CSI and make an animated version of it, why should that automatically lose a piece of its maturity value?

That is kind of a feeble realization to come to, back when I was like 13-14 and someone tried to tell me how retarded anime was they would always show me videos of that "KAWAIII DESU" shite and I believed them, I told my mate about it and he verbally slapped me in the face and showed me some real anime, boy did I feel like a hypocrite, Cowboy Bebop, Hellsings etc, Pure awesome.

Most importantly, Cowboy Bebop, is most probably the best anime ever produced. The soundtrack is excellent and the English dubs are brilliant. The movies released along side it are exceptional and is probably the best space themed anime out there, not to mention the script writing and dialog, After watching the first 3 episodes of that my opinion of anime changed dramatically.

My point is the post I made earlier in the thread- anime isn't something completely different, it's just Japanese animation. But because people hate it, it suddenly becomes something different- that's the only reason why it's treated as something else entirely.

It's not, it's just another form of entertainment...

You ended up liking it because you enjoy story telling. Like I said, ignorance does play a part, but it isn't the main factor.

There are people out there who just don't like to sit through a story unless it's piled up with tons of constant action.

While there are a lot of action anime out there, it's a bit of a stretch to get someone who isn't into listening to a story to sit down and watch it; let alone keep track of an episode count and watch it in sequential order.

Also, as a side note: Lucky Star is awesome! It's just like Seinfeld; just that the main characters are high school girls and the animation is more moe than anything. But seriously, it's a show about nothing.

Crimson wrote on Thu, 08 July 2010 05:52Anime sucks and watching a cartoon as an adult is pathetic.

Exceptions:

* Pixar, cuz Pixar
* If you're watching it with your kids

Most, if not ALL cartoons are created by adults. Are they pathetic too?

Have you ever watched any cartoons or anime? Most of them have a very adult background such as politically incorrect humor, jokes that children find funny while adults relate it to society and much more.

Family Guy and South Park for example are cartoons too, specifically designed for adults, you don't let your children watch those.

Everyone has his/her own opinion about what they watch. Calling them pathetic is nothing more than generalizing a big group of people. It's wrong.

My favorites:
- Devil May Cry
- Witchblade
- Tengen Toppa Gurren Lagann
- Golden Boy (EPIC!!)

R315r4z0r wrote on Sat, 10 July 2010 06:30Ryu wrote on Fri, 09 July 2010 22:25That is kind of a feeble realization to come to, back when I was like 13-14 and someone tried to tell me how retarded anime was they would always show me videos of that "KAWAIII DESU" shite and I believed them, I told my mate about it and he verbally slapped me in the face and showed me some real anime, boy did I feel like a hypocrite, Cowboy Bebop, Hellsings etc, Pure awesome.

Most importantly, Cowboy Bebop, is most probably the best anime ever produced. The soundtrack is excellent and the English dubs are brilliant. The movies released along side it are exceptional and is probably the best space themed anime out there, not to mention the script writing and dialog, After watching the first 3 episodes of that my opinion of anime changed dramatically.

You ended up liking it because you enjoy story telling. Like I said, ignorance does play a part, but it isn't the main factor.

There are people out there who just don't like to sit through a story unless it's piled up with tons of constant action.

While there are a lot of action anime out there, it's a bit of a stretch to get someone who isn't into listening to a story to sit down and watch it; let alone keep track of an episode count and watch it in sequential order.

Also, as a side note: Lucky Star is awesome! It's just like Seinfeld; just that the main characters are high school girls and the animation is more moe than anything. But seriously, it's a show about nothing.
For some reason, I remembered this thread and then I thought of an example to add to my argument:

One of the most loved anime series (especially in the US) is Cowboy Bebop.

You ever hear an anime hater say "Anime sux! Except I do like Cowboy Bebop..." It's because Cowboy Bebop is able to satisfy the attention of western audiences much better than many other shows. How can this be? Well it's because that even though there is a grand story line that undermines the entire series, each episode also holds a self-contained plot of it's own. You can pick up and watch any episode without being left out of the loop.

Another example of a show like this would be Ghost in the Shell. That anime also has a lot of supporters.

And, technically speaking, Lucky Star also follows that same format... but the only reason why that show isn't as popular should be pretty obvious: it looks like it belongs on a pre-school network.

Well its like dragonball z. You couldnt just watch a random episode and take it in.

You need to watch from the beginning to fully follow the story as at the end of the day thats what its all about.

Many people don't like it though because it does drag on and take quite some time to get through.

1: It's a comedy show, if it followed some form of plot where you need to watch previous episodes to get things, it's doing it wrong

2: It's not popular in the west because its style is ridiculous. It tries WAY too hard to be LOL KAWAI DESU UGUU DE-GASO

3: It's about little girls who are supposed to be 17 but look 8

I love that word "uguu." I always lol when I hear it.

Also, comedy shows don't necessarily require non-linear plots. For example, the most funny comedy anime that I've seen is School Rumble (technically it's a romantic comedy but whatever). Now, it doesn't necessarily have a big story line running through it, but it does follow a sequence of events. What happens in one episode will form the basis for later episodes in the series (character development wise).

I dunno. Comedy shows that have a plot, or even just a few plot heavy episodes, generally end up sucking.

Cromartie High School is a perfect example of how anime comedy can be dome amazingly well, though. No plot whatsoever, and actually fucking funny.

Well this topic is still going on. I have to say I haven't watched much Anime recently (maybe a year or so) the last thing I saw was GITS (for the third time)

Im not too sure whether I just dont enjoy Anime anymore or whether its just I dont have time really to sit and watch it.

Edit : Major typo - Hypnos

It's mostly because there just aren't any interesting anime that've come out lately.

There's only two that have remotely interested me- Shiki and Durarara. Shiki I've watched and was actually pretty good, despite the ridiculous character designs.

Durarara I still need to watch, but it looks amusing at least from what I've seen.

Really though, when you have shit like this:

It just makes you lose any and all hope that Japan is capable of producing anything REMOTELY worthwhile.

Dragonball, Dragonball Z and Bleach are the only ones I have seen. From what I gather from seeing other peoples' taste in anime, I must say most of it seems REALLY girly. Pic related.

Someone posted that pic before. I still lol.

That girl in the bottom left frame looks like a powerpuff girl.

Also, watch Death Note, you'd probably like it... unless you're totally offended by a main character being a serial killer.

Most of it IS really girly. But there's some nice serious ones. Such as:

Death Note, Ghost in the Shell, Cowboy Bebop, Trigun, Monster (Haven't finished watching it but all of what I've seen is great so far), Shiki (If you can get past the FABULOUS designs and weird hairstyles), Detective Conan/Case Closed (Same anime, just called Case Closed in the US, but they stopped dubbing it in English due to shitty sales... so as much as it pains me to say, it might be better to start off with the Japanese version ugh), and a few others I probably forgot.

also, on the (really low chance) you're into manga, JoJo's Bizarre Adventure is the best fucking thing ever. FABULOUS characters who are also manly at the same time (Except Giorno, Giorno's just a faggot), tons of lulzy references to music, some of which are hilarious (A villain named Vanilla Ice), and it's been running since the 1980's until now where it's STILL running.
