Okay if I have a teacher that is really pissing me off and is saying innapropriate things about me what should I say to them in an email. I really want to 'own' them prove that they are wrong and that they are a jerk.

It depends on the "inappropriate things" they are saying to you. If it is about your work ethics the teacher is lying about, then you can either e-mail or take it to your counselor/adviser.

If the teacher is simply being rude and spreading falsehood about you then you can complain to the school administration. Just go to the principal's office and the teacher get's pwned.

Sometimes those teachers are from such underfunded shit schools. Sometimes they are simply dumb. LOL reminds me of a real story.

My high school was (still is) in the top 100 list of best high schools in Pennsylvania. Once during 11th grade, my Chemistry teacher got ill and could not come for 2 months. The school had no choice but to get an emergency substitute from a Philadelphia city school. Looks like he was the only one available to teach the subject.

And ROFL hard we did! Haha...the guy was a dumbshit! He didn't have a SINGLE clue as to what he was supposed to be doing. LOL, he would give out tests and quizzes and we wouldn't get them back for like 3 weeks. And when we did, we would all have A's and B's. And he gave out a ton of cheap ass extra credit. And during classtime, we would just sit around and discuss a little bit of chemistry but soon enough the guy would be talking about nuclear proliferation and what not. Hahahahahahahahaha!!!!!!!!!!!!

We learned absolutely nothing those 2 months and when the regular teacher returned, she was MAD AS HELL. And she was very harsh on us for the rest of the year when it came to tests and exams.

But those were great 2 months though lol.

Well, what kind of inappropriate things is the teacher saying, that would give us a better idea as to how we should tell you to resolve the situation.

If you feel like doing something illegal you could always find out where they live and get some buddies to vandalize the place. You could always try shoving a potato up the tail pipe with a broom handle during winter, hopefully it will freeze and expand, and not come out.

If you email your teacher, you will be expelled, it will be teacher slander which is "illegal", thus they suspend or kick you out of school, just forward the email they sent you to the principle or head of your school.....and then you can prnace around "i'm the one who got mrs/mr. so and so fired"

Um... if your teacher is really saying that, then print off a copy, and show it to your parents. Then take it to the Vice Principal.

Don't do anything by yourself.

Good call.

On-topic;

If s/he really did say/write them things to you and you have witnesses then take it to your headmaster and make a formal complaint. If you said that to a teacher you'd get into trouble, works both ways.

Do like the above. If those comments were sent to you via e-mail or some such means, make sure you keep copies.

If they were just said to you, see if anyone else heard them say it, and get a written and signed statement from them, of everything they said and everything you said back, date, time, etc. Or keep a little audio recording device in your pocket and turn it on shortly before going to the class, or whenever it is that the teacher normally says those things to you, so that you can get some proof of what was said.

Then gather all evidence, witnesses, etc. and go to the Principal or Vice Principal about it.

How's this sound?

GIVE THE POWER BACK TO THE TEACHER.

Shit, if your teacher's saying that, he or she is probably right. Looking at your posts confirms my assumption.

Instead of whining and bitching and crying and looking for ways to screw that teacher over, why don't you try excelling at your studies and entirely proving the teacher wrong?

Or what, you aren't capable? yeah, it's looking like it.

I'm sick of you pussy kids not being able to take criticism. I'm sick of all you stupid bitches getting bumped up to the next grade because you're too old to fail. You're all taking our society to the shitter because you're all lazy and stupid. Fuck all of you, especially Crimson.

That's nothing compared to the classes I went through in high school, and my experience is probably nothing compared to French schools here in Quebec.

Schools should all be privatized, that way retards would get expelled and suspended more frequently. This way, we would end with really shitty schools where all the useless kids would end up, while the rest of us could function efficiently in real schools. In government funded schools students can get away with anything because they're 'guaranteed an education.' However, instead of receiving an education, bad students are just forced to sit at a school and ruin the learning process for everybody else.

Anyway, thank God high school ends in grade 11 here and I managed to graduated at 16. I was able to save myself 2 years of unproductive bullshit.

I agree...high school for me was a gigantic waste of time...2.8 GPA weighted. As soon I get to college(where most students want to be there) my grades shoot up to 4.0. It is the atmosphere that counts...surrounding yourself with an environment that promotes excellence instead of being in a room where the teacher spends most of his or her time helping the students that don't give a shit. Let them fail.

When I was still in school all the teaches just gave us a HUGE packet of paper, told us to do all of it before tomorrow, and then surfed the internet till class was over.
