Im looking for a professional software thats like a recording studio....pretty much record audio tracks with a mic or add an existing audio track..

but be able to mix up and edit that tracks like

- Mix More Then One Track Together
- Make Tracks repeat them self at some points (so i can get a beat and at the end it fades out....put it together to make the beat longer but fit in to it)
- Change the pitch and tone so at some parts of the audio tracks i can make the voice go higher or lower
- If possible maybe have a voice changer
- Basic crap...like reverse...add echo...etc
- Multiply effects
- Any Other Audio Editing You Can Think Of

Any professional software that can fit as much stuff i writing above will do....if anything hopefully it all and maybe more:D

i seen lot of cheaper ones that do maybe 1 thing i written above and another one does 1 more but i want a software that can do more then just 1 much as i can out of the list above

Please Please Please And Thank You

I remember using some software called "Audacity" to do some audio mixing. Im not too sure on its features but I think it does them all except voice changer.

Cakewalk.

It will do all you want and more, you can pick up a copy at your local torrent website; or you can do it legally buy it for 69.99 at Best Buy.

As far as free software goes, Audacity is your best bet. Very user friendly.

That depends on how you feel about illegally downloading and installing cracked software.

Audacity is a very user friendly, useful tool for musicians and it does a lot of what the more expensive programs do. And it's free. There are some cheaper softwares such as Goldwave and Fruityloops which range from about £20-£80

For the more mid market software, you're probably looking at software like Reason and Cubase which range from about £200-£400

As for the big dogs, well you can't go wrong with Protools or Nuendo. These range from about £800 or so to about £3000. But unless you're a serious, professional musician, you are really not going to need these.

Cubase SX3!

Or Logic Pro...

Then again, they are pretty complex to use...

i have windows.....i usally think the more price the better....but dang if a software is complex im not sure...i want one that can do what i wrote above and maybe more.. but hopefully not so complex

price is no problem for me i guess most may think why...etherway
i dont wanna make beats i already got fl studios for that i jsut want a software to add the beat track i make to a recording of someone but be able to change around the voice and effect of the audio recording like iv written above

I have 3 years of using it so i can assist you in almost anything you need to do with it.

It does have some good VST's and plugins you can use, however it's about £3-500 a pop, and you need a security dongal, or software that replicates the dongal on your computer to start it up.

It looks like 64 Studio can also be run as a Live CD, meaning he could run it without needing a linux install or killing his XP install.

I use steinberg programs alot: cubase and wavelab. Both are very decent and I got them with my helix board(a good firewire 12 input mixer). Also tried magix music studio/music maker but those are more mixing tools and quite basic.

I used to have a subscription for this magazine which had quite some professional mixer and add ons each release.

I still use simple tools like audacity to do some quick cuttings or simple mixing.
