...And long story short, I owned.

(It's a little blurry, but my ending Credits are 71665.

Has anybody else gotten "Mission Efficiency" That high? Or higher?

Wow, you obviously suck at that game . I've never gotten above 80%, but saying that, I hate TS anyway.

Yeah, it has to do with the amount of money you made.
For high efficiency get a shitload of refs + harvs

I think I had 2000+ efficiency before, but that was when I was using my personal mod.

I've always wondered how the hell I could beat a mission with under a dozen total units and structures lost and yet still get efficiency scores under 50%...

Yeah. This was in that "Assassinate Tratos" mission. Instead of killing him, I decided to dick around and kill every other unit, wall and structure that I couldn't capture. It took a while, especially luring the floating MLRS out to dry land where I could get them. In the mean time I had like 12 refineries going and who knows how many silos...

In the end I got Tratos using GDI's own Hunter Seeker.

Yeah, i always thought it was dumb how it was pretty much based on how many credits you had at the end of the game :/ .

Good job! You guys had the same number of unit casualties, hehe.

For some dumb reason it counted all the civilian/neutral stuff I blew up as my casualties. I didn't lose any structures at all, and I doubt I lost THAT many units.

If you think making the game more balanced cheating, k. Whatever suits you, little faggot.

Game balance is subjective. Not that it matters if you change single player settings anyway...
