it doesn't, you've got the equation mixed up. genetics can determine that (or at least play a part), and genetics also determines skin colour.

In this case, "weaker" is not pertaining to physical strength. The article is about whites being "genetically weaker" than blacks. In other words, black genes are more stable, whereas white genes are more prone to mutate, thus diluting the genome pool. I know my subject line lead to believe otherwise, but I was just joking

I LOL'ed.
They way they were raised in America when transported over as slaves, they were bought up to be physically strong.

Damn it I thought you meant physically weaker.....I wrote a whole thing about "why thats stupid"...Now I have to delete it

On that note, while yes, it is true that because blacks are an older breed of human they are less likely to develop these conditions, blacks are also prone to having vitamin D deficiency, developing dangerous forms of cancer more easily, and have generally more brittle bones.

Fun fact: White skin has been thought to come partially from the ability to fully digest milk XD.
Many blacks have trouble doing that.
