Prince Harry had been fighting secretly in Afganistan for the past 10 weeks and has seen combat. His fellow soldier mates were sworn to secrecy.

Now that the cat is out the bag, the Ministry of defense is re-considering his deployment.

Why would they reconsider it? He enlisted like a normal soilder, yeah, he's royalty, but seriously, how many old kings died to the sword in the olden times? Although, the last thing you want on TV is, Prince Harry killed by a Taliban sniper >>

You asked a question and answered it yourself.

OMG, Ryu! Don't talk like that about your great country's royal family!

Everyone would be upset if the baddest thing happened.

Indeed, have some pride in your Royal Family.

I know people making money for far less than what royal families do. They're just doing their job and get paid for it and they never even got the choice for something else. Sure, they may be paid too much compared to the "effort" but they have a certain responsibility as well.

Having a separate ceremonial head of state means my country isn't internationally represented by a lying, dirty politician.

Prince Harry pulled out of Afghanistan! Must have been fun while it lasted. He could have still fought but the reasoning behind the decision was simple: every British soldier maybe exposed to increased violence from terrorists eager to hurt a juicy target (i.e. a member of the Royal Family).

Yes, you are right...the soldiers won't agree but I was not talking about the soldiers was I? I was talking about Prince Harry...easiest and safest military deployment ever for any one single person.

To be honest if a Soldier is not having fun doing his job, then he shouldn't be in the Army.

If it was like that, there would be no one in the army.

You should enjoy your job, as working is pretty much your life, if you don't enjoy it, what is the point and if a Soldier is not having fun or enjoying being deployed and killing shit, then whats the point of being a Soldier.

I believe this is why all our Soldiers of late are always having metal break downs, they just having got the right shit for this.
