With the stealth units, the tank and the black hand, when are you completely invisible? Do you have to stand still? Or stand still for a certain period of time? I really want to know because sometimes when I stand still people run right by me and other times they come close and start shooting me like im right there.

Enemy tanks and infantry can see you if there get close enough and you only decloak if you fire. Also the GDI Tower will can see you no matter what you do. hop that helps. [[ February 23, 2002: Message edited by: CrazyHavoc ] when cloaked, the GDI gaurd tower can only shot you with his guns but not his missile launcher.

Also if you get hit with a weapon you show much more wiggly lines, I often use just those to aim at cloaked units.

If your teammate sees you he will see the shimmers, the enemy cannot. You will shimmer if you get hit or are being repaired.

If you get close enough, about 10-15 feet, enemies can see a dimmed version of how you and allies see you. They see dimmed electro-wave thingies. They also see you dimmed if you get shot. Just stay 30+ feet away, get behind him, and fill his head with lasers.

I did some stealth tests with a friend with the $400 lasgun blackhand. The range at which an infantry can see you is about 10-15 feet. Past that and your totally invisible(no outline).

Just like in the original TD, you are invisible when you're not firing and when you're far away from enemies. You are visible when you're really close to Infantry or Tanks, and whenever a Guard Tower would be able to shoot at you.
