I have just realised that ImageVenue.com, a site in which I hosted some images for the Park/City Map thread contains some sexual advertising. I only became aware of this after using Internet Explorer to access the site, as I have a Ad-Block plugin for Fire-Fox.

I am sorry if anyone was disturbed with any of the advertising on the pages my images were hosted on. I will cease to use that site for hosting images.

For those who are going to flame about me being a n00b because I am sorry about this, please remember there are some users that are under-age, and the fact you do not have to be a user to view this website, and so some children may have followed the image links.

No-one has reported this to me yet, but I feel it necessary to comment.

Bursts out Laughing Apology accepted, but I really didn't even notice, that crap pops up all over the place nowadays, I have just gotten use to it I suppose.

Ahhh, don't sweat it.

Hell, thanks to you, I've come across a free one month's supply of 'Magna-RX+' which, unlike other products, is guaranteed to enlarge the size of my penis. I'm also just chatting with one of the many 'sexy singles' in my area about the new Rolex watch which I paid only $175 for! She's totally turned on by the free shipping, by the way.

But like the previous poster noted, I didn't notice the porn links either. Still, it's nice of you to give a heads up.

Dthdealer, if you're looking for a good place to store images, you should sign up to n00bstories.com and use the image gallery uploady thing there. It's Crimson approved.

pr0nz on the interwebz? NEVAR!

If you are on the internet and you can't handle a little bit of porn advertisement you are in some really big trouble. N00bstoires image uploader is win/free/porn free.
