It's a bit early, but since i'm doing the already faster course in my study. I guess im just chilling at the pool here, especialy if the summer turns out to be good. I was supposed to go working but that's a no go. That also means no money. But I look at it from the bright side.

If things work out I hope to be working for Dante writing software or at least get a A+ technician job somewhere. I don't really get a summer, I have too much I have to get done.

going to be working tons of overtime, and will most likely ask to cash out some of my vacation hours, if not all.

need to make atleast 3-4k because i fucked up my car last week and now i need to get it fixed.

cant go through insurance since i got into an accident 5 years ago and only this year it goes off my record, which means cheaper insurance rates.

if i get my insurance to pay for the repairs on my car then it will be another 6 years before i will be paying reasonable rates.

sigh, yeah thats pretty much my summer.

unless some miracle happens

Most of my time (and the year and the next) I spend on studying. I am working on my A+ certification now...I am going to the exam the last week of this month or the first week of next month. Then the Network+ certification and then I am tackling the MCSE. I put a hold on my college degree till I am done with these but I am confident.

Then ofcourse, playing Renegade (with my new clanmates). Also, inline-skating with my buddy to keep fit. We plan to slice across the city (Philadelphia).

I also do computer related jobs for the neighborhood I live in now. I get lots of $$ that way. I sure hope more PC's breakdown this summer (unlike last summer) and people get viruses more so I can go fix them. lol

I also LOVE hiking/camping solo. It's been a while since I camped solo but I think I will do that a couple times this summer.

That's pretty much it. Studying...and then for fun, Renegade and sometimes skating/wandering the woods. That's pretty much my summer.
