Cool thing, but, not going to change anything.

People are assholes. Always going to be that way.

Also, now I know that anyone that doesn't talk tomorrow is gay, so thanks for the heads up.

Hey, I didn't say I didn't like gays. I just said I'd know who was. I support gay rights and all that too, seriously. Growing up in 21st century America makes you joke like that sometimes I guess?

I know, that is what I was aiming for aswell.

First paragraph from wikipediaCatalysis is the process by which the rate of a chemical reaction (or biological process) is increased by means of the addition of a species known as a catalyst to the reaction. What makes a catalyst different from a chemical reagent is that whilst it participates in the reaction, is not consumed in the reaction. That is, the catalysts may undergo several chemical transformations during the reaction, but at the conclusion of the reaction, the catalyst is regenerated unchanged. As a catalyst is regenerated in a reaction, often only a very small amount is needed to increase the rate of the reaction.

Oh why don't you just give me a free assbat instead? How is a silent protest even come close to solving the problem? It raises awareness of the issue no doubt but that's all it does. The problem remains.

There are three major religions right now and fortunately or unfortunately, one of them is dominant in America. As long as this religion flourishes, there will always be many self-righteous beings who would look down on homosexuals. Then count the other religions that forbid homosexuality.

I remember not having any tolerance for homosexuals when I was a devout practicing Christian. Then you have the closet-religious who could care less about their god but nevertheless, feel threatened by the whole issue for no fucking reason whatsoever.

Then you have to count in the non-religious who dislike homosexuals just because it is weird or "wrong." Whatever the hell that means...

Then there are those religious folks who don't dislike homosexuals.

Seriously, people should not care what others choose to do. It's none of anyone's bloody business.

Pope = Religion? lol

Just because people who have religious beliefs manipulate them to serve their own personal selfish desires doesn't mean the religion they manipulate is bad. I can make the counter argument that atheism is bad by saying that the Soviet (atheist state) discrimination and persecution of political and ethnic groups was because of atheism. Ignorance of others and human greed drive acts such as terrorism and illegitimate wars because every person holds desires to steal, to commit violent action onto someone, or to fear what is unknown or strange, blaming religion is not the source of the problem, but a distraction to the real purpose of the crime.

sorry, where's the holy scripture of atheism which justified any of that? more to the point, what's the connection between that and an atheist?

My point was that just because a person commits an act that is considered bad, one cannot call his religious (or lack thereof) beliefs bad as well(there are always exceptions of course, but I do not see one in this case). My comparison with the Soviet Union was that since they were an atheist state, and many of their inspirations for their political philosophy (communism) were indeed atheist, I could make the counter argument (with Sadukar's perceived logic) that atheism was the cause for the bad things in which the soviets did to their people. In my beliefs I do not think that atheism caused the soviet's and their leaders to persecute it's peoples. My argument clearly states it is because of human ignorance and greed that men and nations do these acts.

I present a "squeaky clean image" because we have yet to get into specifics. I was only countering the notion that religion which I can only presume to be all since it is generalized is the "catalyst for bad stuff" which is simply not true. I was meaning no issue and no religion in particular, if you want to start a debate on Islam and homosexuality, great, but saying one religion is bad won't become a universal law for all religions.

I have never said and will never say that all religions are good. If you get that perception from me you are mistaken.

Sorry if you misunderstand when I say that homosexuality is not a crime, I am simply giving my opinion on the matter, nothing more.
