Quote:-- BCPT Fancasts: Make your own BCPT videos, in English or any other language. Just send a request to BCPT@EA.com and we'll set you up with all the C&C TV graphics and sounds. Check out the fancast that started it all, BCPT Denmark, at www.youtube.com/bcptdenmark/

I know we have some gifted video makers in here, but does this community have what it takes to make a full episode of C&C TV for Renegade?

We'd at least need a:

- script
- preferably 2 show hosts presenting all the material, native English speaking people would be good
- Renegade related videos
- some humor

I think with the help of some dedicated people, this could become a community project like we've never seen one before.

Use this topic to brain storm and propose your help . If I find enough enthusiastic people for this, I will try to coordinate this effort.

If someone doesn't know what C&C TV is, check www.commandandconquertv.com and chekc Battle Cast Prime Time (BCPT).

I did bring up the idea of a "Replay of the Week" where I commentate over a fraps'ed (and possibly spectated) game, talking tactics etc. was gonna work with tunaman on that, but he said brb and never actually did.

I'd be happy to do that if someone else can do the actual frapsing...

LMAO, he just came back today (after he said brb several months ago), I gave him the link to download and install Renegade.

We could make a top 5 replay, like battle cast primetime always does. Actually, replays are an important part of C&C TV but they are always cut short to only show the interesting parts of it, ofcourse.

Doing the frapsing is not a problem, taking the time to edit the videos is harder .

I already have someone in mind for the community corner: WNxAndy has a huge C&C collection, just like APOC does in his community corner. Donno if he'd be interested to participate.

If someone doesn't know what C&C TV is, check www.commandandconquertv.com .

what a jerk... tell him to get his priorities straight, what could possibly be more important than Replay of the Week?

especially if it was on Map_Of_Champions.mix

If it is really on that map, then I will tell him to prioritize the RotW over anything else.

There can also be a section featuring every single non-Westwood map (there's more than enough to go through in the Uber Map Pack).

I could help out, Fraps or video editing (No WMM plz.) or just commentary.

Skype could be ideal for this, as well as Vent or Teamspeak.

Still looking for 2 hosts who could present the material in battlecast prime time style. This means you'd need to make a little fake studio to record it in.

Hmhmh, I think a mix of the 2 idea's would be the best option (spoons and the battle prime time), im thinking have 1 host (2 is too difficult), introduce the game, and then play clips (or a part of) a 1v1 or 2v2 of feild, (I could fraps, I already got alot of video's (most on youtube already)), 2 people narrate what exactly is going on, the vechs, tactics being used, possiblle outcomes, etc, and then maybe a public server like jelly game, and then a conclusion by the host. Something like this in my mind can take maybe even only a week and only requires:

- 1 host (with camera, "studio", or webcam with software)
 - 2 commentaries (2 cw.cc people because they know tactics)
 - fraps'r, video software and server with !spectate (I know how to use all 3, and so do other people)
 - teamspeak server to record everything while its going on (2 commentatores, and the fraps'r.
 - someone with sony vegas, etc skills (im ok) to put it all together.

I had thought that the commentator would be me and a special guest each week - someone from the server, the leader of the community-match team, someone from the clan, etc...

I'm a fan of this idea. Brings difference as well as a "stable anchor"

Besides some of the more devout Renegade community members, who else will really be watching?

The host(s) would have to be charismatic, and able to keep the viewer entertained throughout the video's duration; he or she will also have to appeal to wide markets like the United States, England, and Europe. How well this will work will likely depend on the host's ability to 'sell' their act, and make it interesting.

People are fickle, so any dry moments will likely mean the viewer will click the big red 'x' , and move to watching angry cats on YouTube. Others might just prefer to play the game, instead of watching other people play.
