I graduated high school tonight with a few achievements under my belt, but that's not why I created this topic. Its about that time of the year for peeps to graduate, so congratuations to those of you who have or are graduating this year! Kudos to the Classes of 2008!

congratulations to all of you who are gratuating or just finishing another year of education.

just remember not to hurry and get out into the working world, i mean look at it this way you are soon to be completing 12 or more years of education, but you still have another 30 or more years of work ahead of you.

unless you are playing the lottery and are feeling lucky lol.

in any case congrats and party on Congratz.

I graduated from the VMBO-Kader (Dutch GCSE's) In 2006.
I will never forget that day, as I actually had to study for it instead of some people who could easily do uni level but decided to be lazy/or throw with the cap instead.

I am doing ICT right now. And once I get that certificate I might go for the 4 years Master/Bachelor. At the other hand I believe the Navy is a nice place to be too.

Whatever happens, as long as you can study, try to study. Because once you go to work it will be harder to get back to study.

Last 2 weeks of classes. Luckily I don't even have to write a final this semester. I got an exempt for marks in biology and a recommendation for attendance in english(I hope for both). I go in to work on a project in carpentry and sit on a city bus to test a pre-made accelerometer for physics.

I'll be done high school and moving onto premedical for the fall semester coming up.
