Spoony, Crimson, jonwil...probably many more mods and admins all have the Tiberium avatar. I think this is something related to the Arrow.

"it will change Renegade the right way"...

It's probably a link up between BlackHand and some canon corrective Tiberian Twilight initiative to address the new bastardized storyline out of EA, thus the "TT".

A guess of course.

It was the working title of the followup to Tiberian Sun before Westwood studios closed. Then EA decided in their ignorance to upend everything and "redefine" c&c. We see how well that worked out...

Less and less people know this old school stuff. Sad really

Funny you say that because it isn't true. Tiberian Twilight was NOT a working Title for the 3rd game. Never was. What it was, was a tentative title that the C&C community came up with. The actual working title for Westwood's C&C3 was called Command & Conquer: Incursion. (Or so we can tell from a few sources such as released concept art.)

And as a matter of fact, most people don't even realize they do this but they are all saying "OMG C&C3 IS SUX CAUSE EA MADE <Insert gameplay mechanic, art decision, unit design> LIKE THAT WHEN WW WOOD OF MADE IT LIKE THAT <insert idea>"

That statement is totally wrong. EA used Westwood's concept art to plan out Tiberium Wars. The Nod Power Plant you see in C&C3 was actually a concept that Westwood created. And did you know that it was Westwood's idea to cut the Mammoth MKII? Yes, as a matter of fact EA's Mammoth Tank in C&C3 is basically a rounded form of Westwood's C&C3 Mammoth Tank! (Or so I can tell from this early tech demo screen shot of the UI:

http://www.cnc-source.com/forums/index.php?autocom=gallery&req=si&img=60_14)

My point is, people should not complain about stuff in C&C3 and blame EA when they don't know where the idea had roots in. This is why I keep on saying that people don't really hate EA, they just say they do because they think they are cool.
