Great movie, I loved the changes in the plot that happened. However I will need to see it a few more times because it changes a lot. Also, sitting in the second to front row doesn't help.

Thoughts if you've seen it?

My sister is anti-batman, unless it's made be Tim Burton

Just got back from seeing it on the IMAX big screen. Epic. However, I think I need to watch it a second time to make a full judgement on it.

"Need to watch it a second time"

You mother fuckers need to realise how awesome Christian Bale is, and that is the only factor on deciding how good the film is, if Christians performance was awesome.

Here's a clip of that sexy beast in motion.

It was too psychological for me. I spent most of it upset or worried about real life problems.

Great movie. It was quite different from Batman Begins, and was just a treat to see. Christian Bale and Heith Ledger were brilliant. This movie has probably moved up to being my new favourite movie. Had to wait in line for an hour but was able to get good seats

We came to the movie in the middle of the previews. We didn't have to wait, and watching a dead druggie perform was awesome. Why did he have to die??@!!

Don't worry about the originals. The only thing you absolutely have to see before watching The Dark Night is Batman Begins (2005) with Christian Bale and Liam Neeson, seeing as The Dark Night is more or less the sequel to it. Both movies out-epic any other Batman movie.

Definitely one of the best Batman movies.

Although I was sort of upset that they ditched the original creation of the Joker... the movie was still very, very much worth it. I would definitely recommend you all to see it.

Wow. Best movie produced in many years. I went in with high expectations and I was stilled wowed.

I've got no gripes. 10/10 for me.
