That's already been thought off and the side effect is that if you run into or near a enemy soldier, then your mines will explode and cause you lots of damage.

The mines wont damage you if you are in a vehicle, if they are your mines (say planted on another persons vehicle) and you are close then you will take damage. The problem with mine ramming is that the damage isn't that great, and you are taking mines away from your team.From last night: SomeNewbie - "I CANT LAY ANY MORE MINES SO SOMEONE ELSE NEEDS TO"
