Yeah, It will die VERY soon, It's skin isn't even developed, let alone fully grown organs and nerve systems, etc.

Thats just weird. I'm all for keeping a child if it is alive, but thats just taking it to the extreme. I'd say kill the child and put it out of the misery that would soon come. It would be a mercy for it.

Now you've started a debate there, if someone is in pain should you put them out of their misery and would it be right to do so?

EDIT: Unless that was what the point of this thread was(that question^^)?

We're not talking about a man who's lost all his legs and arms in war, brain damage, no nerve system and is a total vegetable, we're talking talking about a.. ooh let's see.. 2 month old fetus, that WILL die very soon since it has no skin, barely any muscles, very small organs and probably no conscious mind.

that thing won't be able to grow another inch, killing it now wouldn't be murder.

hmm with my mind I reckon I should work at abortion clinics.

Yes it is. Murder is taking the life of another human being. And by definition, a fetus, although not fully developed, is still a human. Therefore it is murder if you kill it.

Ugh, these kinds of situations are fucking retarded, just like this lady. It's not even conscious, and all she's doing is giving her other children horrible nightmares and clinging to some fuck-tarded religious doctrine that she's probably misinterpreting.

It's not autonomous. I doubt it is even sentient yet. I'm not sure if it can even feel. If it can't feel, and it's going to die, then I don't know if it's cruel to keep it alive, and if it makes the parents happy... whatever. If it can feel, thus be in pain, and it's not going to have any happy, autonomous future, there's no point in keeping it alive.

This is the exact same thing as abortion. EXACT SAME THING.

If you are against abortion, then you should be against killing this child. If you are for killing the child, then you aren't against abortion.

I for one could not care less as it ain't my kid.

How is this anything like abortion? If the child can develop outside of the womb, then you shouldn't kill it. However, an 8 week old fetus is not capable of surviving outside of the womb.

Because one of the main arguments for abortion is that the child feels pain at very early stages of pregnancy and therefore it is inhumane to kill it.

What did it lose its sense of feeling when it exited the womb? It makes no difference inside or outside of the womb because it was never part of the woman's body in the first place. Even if the child can't survive birth from an abortion, there are still people against it.

You're an idiot.

Never have I used the argument that it "feels pain"*. That only leads down a slippery slope, and is just a weak argument. A lot of things feel. Does that make it wrong to euthanize our pets? Is it wrong to hunt and eat meat?

I'm pro-life, but I'm also pro-euthanasia/mercy killings. If something/someone is in pain and/or has absolutely no foreseeable future, especially no autonomous, happy future, then it's proper to put the being out of its misery.

Oh, and it can't feel. It can't feel until the third trimester...

<http://jama.ama-assn.org/cgi/content/full/294/8/947>electroencephalography suggests the capacity for functional pain perception in preterm neonates probably does not exist before 29 or 30 weeks

* I know you never said that I have used the argument. You did, however, say that anybody against abortion should be against killing the child and that "pain" is a "main" argument against abortion. Seeing as I'm pro-life, you 'implied' that I've used the argument or would support it.

I don't like grays. Grays make things convoluted.

My views are based on principle rather than emotion. Emotions are inconsistent. It's what creates differences in legal rights. It's what creates wasteful spending.

Kind of like letting your morals get in the way of your realization as well, you'll call a bad judgment.

Anyway yeah, the fetus isn't developed.. if it has a nerve system but no fully developed brain it's pretty much a vegetable, how she had a miscarriage I don't know, But keeping it alive.. well yeah, if it can feel pain it's hurting real badly now since it's got no skin and dead ends for a nerve system.
