No, can you not see the closed circle elitedness such a system would create? Causing permanantly lower player counts...

Just find a server with a high standard of play or get involved with cw.cc or (for the ultimate experience) join a community, and try and get onto their (if they paraticipate) team that plays in the inter-community matches.

Finally. Stop spamming topics.

It all depends on times/who's playing. Our server usually has a fair amount of teamwork but only around evening GMT as our usuals are around then.

It's good to have new players join though, they'll learn quicker in an environment with a lot of good players. Separating "good" from "bad" will only make Renegade die quicker.

I wonder- what defines a "pro" for you? You've given us a word, but you've failed to define it- what characteristics define a "pro?"

I ask because I've yet to see a definition for the term that isn't as shallow as most of the people who apply it to themselves. Usually it is thrown around by people who think score is everything, or that being able to headshot while bouncing around like a bunny rabbit automatically makes them the master of the game. So, when you say "pro," what exactly do you mean?

what i mean with pro is; players with a deep gaming culture, which makes them fair, good, and humble.

to be more spesific, i dont want any retards to join to the server just for sniping for like 40 min, then join the rest of the team with sbh nuke or something. what that kind of people do is, just snipe for no purpose (probably the almost half of the team are sniping in the tunnels, not even in field), then when the other teams defence is down, they suddenly become the most cooperative sonofab****es in the world, joining u with a flamer when there are 4 or 5 stanks waiting for more to come. (i havent seen exactly that kind of a thing but im expecting u to understand what i mean) thats the 1 of the lamest thing about this game because what they do is sniping people that dont trying to snipe them.

1 other thing is, sbh nukers on islands.mix. they just keep nuking and nuking even they know they will fail, resulting on giving a large amount of pts and credits to the other team. im not getting deeper on that because i guess u know what i mean.

these are only some examples of such people, i bet we all have long stories about those people.

i hope u can understand this post, since my english is on the rocks

I would suggest you make a clan with the best players you know, and play a few series against H2O and the like at Clanwars.cc.

You would certainly not need to worry about your teammates spamming your radio or stealing your tank... the whole definition of a clan game is that you choose your own teammates.

Caveman wrote clanwars.cc is where all the 'omg im so pro, im like way better then you, 1v1 or stfu cos im pro player' players are.. Go there.

I beg to differ, public servers and communities are infested with this mentality too.

Pros are n00bs. Anyone who considers themselves as pro, is a n00b by default. (Perspective: C4_Master_Smoke (w/e his name is)) Every person I've seen consider them self a pro, has acted in a similar fashion to C4smoke.

I would never, never play on such as server, ever. The most of the time you get team play is when you are playing with new players, because older players will know they can do things that don't involve the rest of the team.

He is a person in the community who has a bad attitude, cheats, lies about it, then cheats again. He has been given countless chances to redeem himself and yet falls back into the same hole. It recently was kicked out, but he has a habit of coming back using different names.

They are saying you are him, but I honestly don't think so because your grammar is much better than his.

We shouldn't call them anything. They are players who play a game. No different than anyone else except for those who think highly of themselves. A 'good player' is no different than a 'bad player'...

The game simply wouldn't be fun if everyone knew what they were doing.

in my eyes the people that are 'pro' are the people who at the start say: 'i'll be a tech for ur arty' or who don't hide in the veh u are repairing and try and save it when an apache is above their head.

the people who say: 'i'm pro u are noob so u will be my tech' don't deserve the title 'pro'.

so what would you call your perfect "team mate"?

its unbelievable that people are still discussing the word "pro".

ok then were all newbies and we dont know how to play, or how to cooperate, huh? that doesnt make any sense.

it boils down to a very simple point.

to say you only want pros on your team, it goes without saying that you essentially want to pick your team.

in that case, you wanna play clan games or community matches. cos that's what they are, by definition, compared to public servers... you pick your team, as does the opposition.

I have always maintained that there is a difference between public server pros and clan pros.

I have seen people play in public servers and always get mvp, best kd etc. But when it comes down to raw tankage in a 1v1 these people lose.

@ candys comment about a pro being the guy who techs the arty, say you are very good with artys and the other guy near you is bad... does it not make sense for him to tech you as you will not miss with the arty and he will.

I have always found the best players in cws are the ones who know exactly what to do at the right time and can deduct what the enemy is doing in seconds.

On field 2v2 if I get out tanked I usually pick the perfect time for a agt walk, or bar nuke and often it will win a game against someone who is much better than me in tanks, for this reason I often win against TD on field 2v2 even though he is better with tanks than me... as a result he gets pissed .
