Hey hey,

The hosting company i work at grants free .nl domain names.

go to
<http://www.tiberium-planet.com>

Click on the PCextreme banner.
After that click on the main banner on the pcx page.

Fill in the following code: 2JNLDO

Then you have your own free domain name for a year.

Moderator edit: The first year is free, after that you are forced to pay for a second year.

It's sad that people resort to free domains when they're only like ten dollars a year.

Simple answer as the wiki stated, it is the ccTLD(countrycodeTopLevelDomain) for the Netherlands, just like .de is the ccTLD for the Germany, and .ca is the ccTLD for Canada, need I continue?

Not exactly, .com is classified as a Generic Top Level Domain, and .nl is classified as a Country Code Top Level Domain, .com is associated with the most commonly used TLDs(.net, .org, .gov) where .nl would be associated with Country Specific(or Country Code) TLDs(.ca, .de, .uk, .au, and the list goes on too far for me to list).

Because he's never fucking Googled ANYTHING, he asks about every little thing, so far, 99% of what he asked can be easily found by Google.

Because people like SSnipe lack good grammar or the ability to use a search engine. Worse on top of that, they ask for constant advice, but never take it.

Let's conveniently ignore the terms of use.

The first year is free, after that you are forced to pay for a second year.

Enjoy your pageclicks and aids.
