You don't make people audition to be your friend. This is just a publicity stunt.

YOU THINK? Of course, it's a publicity stunt. That's why it's being turned into a "reality" show. It's purely for ratings, and I don't doubt that Paris is going to make a crapload of money for being the same, stupid celebutante she's famous for being.

Maybe you didn't sense any anger in my post, but whatever.

Well, it was obvious that it's a publicity stunt. I don't think it needed to be said, even in anger. Meh.

Just sounds like that show with Tila Tequila, and all those other exercises in human dumbnation.

Chances are, Paris will just have this person hold onto Tinkerbell and scoop up his shit while she shops.

It's a PR show/stunt thing, so... it's not really real is it, whoever wins this will mostly like be dumped after a few weeks or something.

But if a man wins it, lucky bastard.

it says friend... man who wins will be condemned to listening to her go on about shoes etc. Only way a man will want to be here friend is if hes gay.

Any other man would be like 'i'll be ur friend', then he will get her drunk and have sex with her. End of friendship.

Most dudes can do way better than Paris Hilton anyway. I think most contestants will be those whiny eighteen year old girls who think economic hard times means they'll have to give up their Range-Rover, for a meager Cadillac Escalade.

It's likely that 99% of all the people that go on it will be the type that will be like 'OMG im friends with a celebrity' which, you'd assume, she wouldn't want...
