I'd like to know whose names you are on Renegade. Btw, have you seen Party_Animal_08 recently?

Hey, bet you could never have guessed that from my forum login name. In my opinion players who use loads of different names are probably trying to hide something, like the fact they are a known cheater or someone who was banned from a server for some other reason. Why would you even NEED more than one login name, it's not as if you can play against yourself...

Indeed. My name ingame is StealtEye, without the h because the WOL/XWIS nick limit is 9 characters.

I can think of one reason. If a freind wants to play it on your computer. However, that only constitutes having 2 names.

Also, if you care about what online gamers think of your skills (lol) and you ever want to mess around in a match without actually trying then a person might switch names.

bisen11 wrote on Wed, 08 October 2008 22:43I can think of one reason. If a freind wants to play it on your computer. However, that only constitutes having 2 names.

The context is names you personally use, if your friend created a name it would be them using it, and hence their name, not yours, regardless of the fact it's on your serial, which is irrelevant to the topic of this particular discussion.

Though you could still tell if it were that person unless they change their ip also.

Believe it or not some people might see a nick-name like a piece of clothing, in they'd rather not keep the same one out of staleness....but that's just certain people...

I've had the name futura83 for ages now, which was my login name for a site i used to own, which is why i used it...that and it's unique as far as i know.
