I HAVE NEVER SEEN A GAME WITH SO MANY NEWBIES! I'M AVERAGE AND A AT BEST AND A 56KER AND YET I CAN OFTEN GET 2ND OR 1ST PLACE! Its SAD when you consider that this game is VERY newbie friendly. Heck, even my sister who has never played an FPS before could probly Own everyone once she gets used to the controls!And here is some proof that the Renegade community doesn't know jack about teamwork.85\% of everyone I meet on Renegade is a newbie or total loser.10\% of everyone I meet is a average skilled lone wolf that doesn't care about the rest of the team.And the remaining 5\% are the REAL players!But then again, I think I know why players play lone wolfs.The ladder system discourages teamwork. If I were to take a flame tank and shred 2 buildings and get 4000 points, I would get only 1000-3000 if someone else in a flame tank tagged along.

I am not a newbie rank 300 just now.. not that the rankings really mean you are good/bad.. just how much time you have to play.The game is quite new. give it some time or, if you want a good game play on servers with NO Noobies plz or something like that.I played on one of these servers and loved every second of it. everyone on both sides worked as teams. and we were both pretty much evenly matched. I lost some, won others (although i was mvp*3, whooo) hehe. my point is that the retail game is quite new, give it some time.either that or when air units are released sit up above and shoot all the newbies that is what i plan to do

Hehe, You kinda have a point there.Me and my teammate (Kingmada) where playing 2vs2 against complete newbies, one of them attacked kingmada with the repair gun! We won easily after a nice flame tank rush

The strategy is.....dash into the base with your head and knock out any things that is in front of you...

What's even funnier is that you can just sit and gain ranks. I gained like +1,000 in one day just doing nothing and letting the newbs move down the ladder. But overall the ladder thing is stupid. Always has been in every WW game.

I think it's good that the game is newbie freindly. More cannon fodder = less snipers shooting at me.I see what you mean though. In some public games you can duel with 4 newbies at the same time and still win on a 56KV91.

You should of been there last night on that serve xxxgijoe and Hobbes made. Mad teamwork, and no lone wolves. Best time I ever had playing the game. Then again it was all people who complain about teamwork and such.

Not entirely sure if this is a side topic but it has to do with teamwork. This game should've been pushed with Game Voice or some other voice software. Better comms would definitely help team playing. Speaking of which, is anybody using Game Voice or Roger Wilco in the game? Other than that I do consider myself a newbie, but catching on

Well, PsiTanker, I'm considering buying a headset or microphone and then use Roger Wilco, but I haven't got the full game yet. So I can't play with you (that is if you have the full game.)Is the game worth buying or not???I'm playing the demo, but I'm not convinced yet.

I'm addicted to playing the game online. The rotation of maps keeps me interested, otherwise there isn't much difference. Don't buy it for the single-player aspect. quote:Originally posted by Dark_Knight:Well, PsiTanker, I'm considering buying a headset or microphone and then use Roger Wilco, but I haven't got the full game yet. it works better if you ram your butt into them instead of your head

Well i think its better when you call your team buy stealth tanks THEN rush the base,Works more efficient.
